Million Soldiers To Be Overseas By End of Month

President Says Axis Powers Have Lost Initiative for Time Being at Least

Progress Is Good

As Striking Power Grows Care of Despoiled Peoples Increases

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—President Roosevelt informed Congress today that by the end of this month American forces overseas will number more than 1,000,000 men.

The President, in the seventh quarterly report on Lend-Lease operations, said in a letter of transmittal that the Axis powers "have, temporarily at least, lost the initiative," and added:

"We must do all we can to keep them from regaining it."

Lend-Lease aid in the last three months up to December 11, totaled $2,367,000,000, he reported. This was more than a third higher than the figure for the previous quarter and four times the total for the three months immediately preceding United States entry into the war.

The President said that since the last report the war had entered a new phase with United Nations forces attacking from Egypt and North Africa and contesting with the Axis "for control of the African coastline of the Mediterranean."

"The Soviet Army, having held with stubborn bravery at Stalingrad, has now assumed the offensive," he added. "The Japanese have been recklessly expending ships and men in the Solomons, a battleground of our own choosing.

"The Axis powers have, temporarily, at least, lost the initiative. We must do all we can to keep them from regaining it."

The Chief Executive went on to say that "we must bring the full strength of all the United Nations to bear directly against the enemy," adding:

"We must bring together our joint productive capacity and our material resources, our finished munitions, and our fighting power; and we must do this in accordance with a single world strategy.

"That we are making good progress in this direction I think is shown by recent developments, and by this report on the part played by Lend-Lease."

The President said that as the Allied striking power grows and new territories are liberated a new task develops — supplying medicines, food, and clothing to the peoples who had been "plundered, despoiled and starved."

"The Nazis and Japanese," he said, "have butchered innocent men and women in a campaign of organized terror. They have stripped the lands they hold of food and other resources. They have used hunger as an instrument of the slavery they seek to impose."

Allied policy is the "direct opposite" he continued, adding: "United Nations forces will bring food for the starving and medicine for the sick. Every aid possible will be given to restore each of the liberated countries to soundness and strength, so that each may make its full contribution to United Nations victory, and to the peace which follows."

Total value of Lend-Lease goods transferred and services rendered since the beginning of the program on March 11, 1941, to November 30, 1942, was placed at $7,496,000,000 in the report. This compared with $5,129,000,000 reported in the sixth report three months ago.

For the 12 months ending November 30, the first year of American participation in the war, Lend-Lease aid totaled $6,526,000,000.

The report placed the current rate of assistance at approximately $10,000,000,000 annually. This is about 15 per cent of the current rate of spending "on the overall United States war program," the President said and "thus, we are now putting about one-seventh of our total effort into Lend-Lease aid to the other United Nations."

Surrogate Is Asked To Decide State Of Koehler's Mind

Settlement of Estates Is Before H. H. Flemming; Hearing to Be Held December 14

On August 8, last, Adolph Koehler, 56-year-old fingerprint and photograph expert at the Wallkill Medium Security Prison, was found in a dying condition in his home by State Police who broke into the house after being summoned by neighbors. His wife was already dead. At the time a note was found indicating that the couple had died in a suicide pact. The note had been written by Koehler.

An investigation indicated that Koehler had died from taking deadly potassium cyanide which was used in the developing of pictures. Koehler was still alive when the State Troopers arrived but died within a few minutes. His wife, Elizabeth Koehler, 67, was already dead when the officers arrived.

Later it was found the body of Mrs. Koehler contained no poison and following embalming fingermarks appeared on her throat leading Coroner Jesse McHugh to render a verdict of "probable homicide by strangulation." Since it was established that Mrs. Koehler had died before her husband it was believed that he had strangled her and then taken the deadly potion and was found dying when the Troopers arrived. Since he died, there was no further need for prosecution of the case as the death of Mr. Koehler precluded any criminal prosecution of the supposed murderer.

However, now the question of whether Mr. Koehler did kill his wife and if so whether he was mentally unbalanced at the time must be decided. The decision must come, not from the usual court which hears homicide cases but from Surrogate Harry H. Flemming, who has been petitioned to determine that question in order that a settlement of the estates of the couple may be properly settled.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Koehler were previously married and both have children by their previous marriage. Prior to August 8 both had made wills. Those wills provided that in the event of the death of either party, their estate should go to the surviving husband or wife.

However the matter was somewhat complicated when Mr. Koehler, apparently after his wife's death, drew up a codicil to his will which would have deprived her surviving heirs of the estate. This codicil was not witnessed and therefore became void. It is believed that the codicil was written after Mrs. Koehler's death or at least that day and at about the same time that the suicide pact note was written.

Since Mrs. Koehler had been dead for some time when the troopers entered the premises and Mr. Koehler had been alive when the officers first arrived at the house, it is known that Mr. Koehler survived his wife and therefore became the heir to her property under the will which she had made some time ago. Now the question is whether her property should go to the surviving heir of Mr. Koehler, since he survived his wife and thereby came into all of her property under her will, or whether because she was strangled by Mr. Koehler, whether her will would become void because of such homicide, and her property should go to her sons by a prior marriage as had been directed in a previous will which she had made

Decorations Are Banned in City Theatres, Clubs

All decorations in public halls and theatres, including the municipal auditorium, have been banned by Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, enforcing officer of the State Labor Board. The state board notified the fire chief that the rule banning the use of all decorations in places of public assemblage must be strictly enforced.

In the night clubs and halls in Ulster county, outside the city, the enforcing officers are the State Troopers who also have notified the proprietors to that effect.

The enforcement of the rule banning all decorations in public halls and theatres followed closely on the Cocoanut Grove Night Club holocaust of November 28, in Boston.

At the last food show held in the municipal auditorium the decorations consisted of fireproof paper, but even decorations of this kind can not be used under the present ban.

The ban is enforced as a matter of public policy in making for the safety of the patrons who attend public balls and dances in the city.

City Board Sends Fuel Oil Coupons; 3 Classes Are Issued

Classifications Determine Gallonage, Periods of Validity; O.P.A. May Alter Them

Kingston's War Price and Rationing Board have started mailing fuel oil ration coupons and it will take several days before all have been mailed.

Before the coupons are valid the consumer must write the serial number of the coupon sheet on each coupon. Consumers must also turn over to their suppliers coupons to equal the number of gallons bought since October 1, 1942. In the future, it was said, no fuel oil or kerosene will be supplied unless the consumer has valid coupons to turn over to the supplier.

Three Classes Issued

Three classes of coupons are being issued, with Class 1 and 2 for heating and hot water. Class 1 has a value of ten gallons and Class 2 of one hundred gallons. These are issued for each of five heating periods.

The coupons for Period 1 are valid up to December 23, 1942, and for Period 2, between December 3, 1942 and January 19, 1943. Coupons for Period 3 are valid from January 6, 1943, to February 20, 1943; for Periods 4 from February 7, 1943, to March 26, 1943, and for Period 5 from March 13, 1943, to September 30, 1943. These periods may be changed by the Office of Price Administration from time to time.

The class 3 coupons having a value of one gallon each for cooking and industrial use have been issued for a six-month period from October 1, 1942 to March 31, 1943. Consumers using these coupons should be careful in their use as they must last until the last of next March.

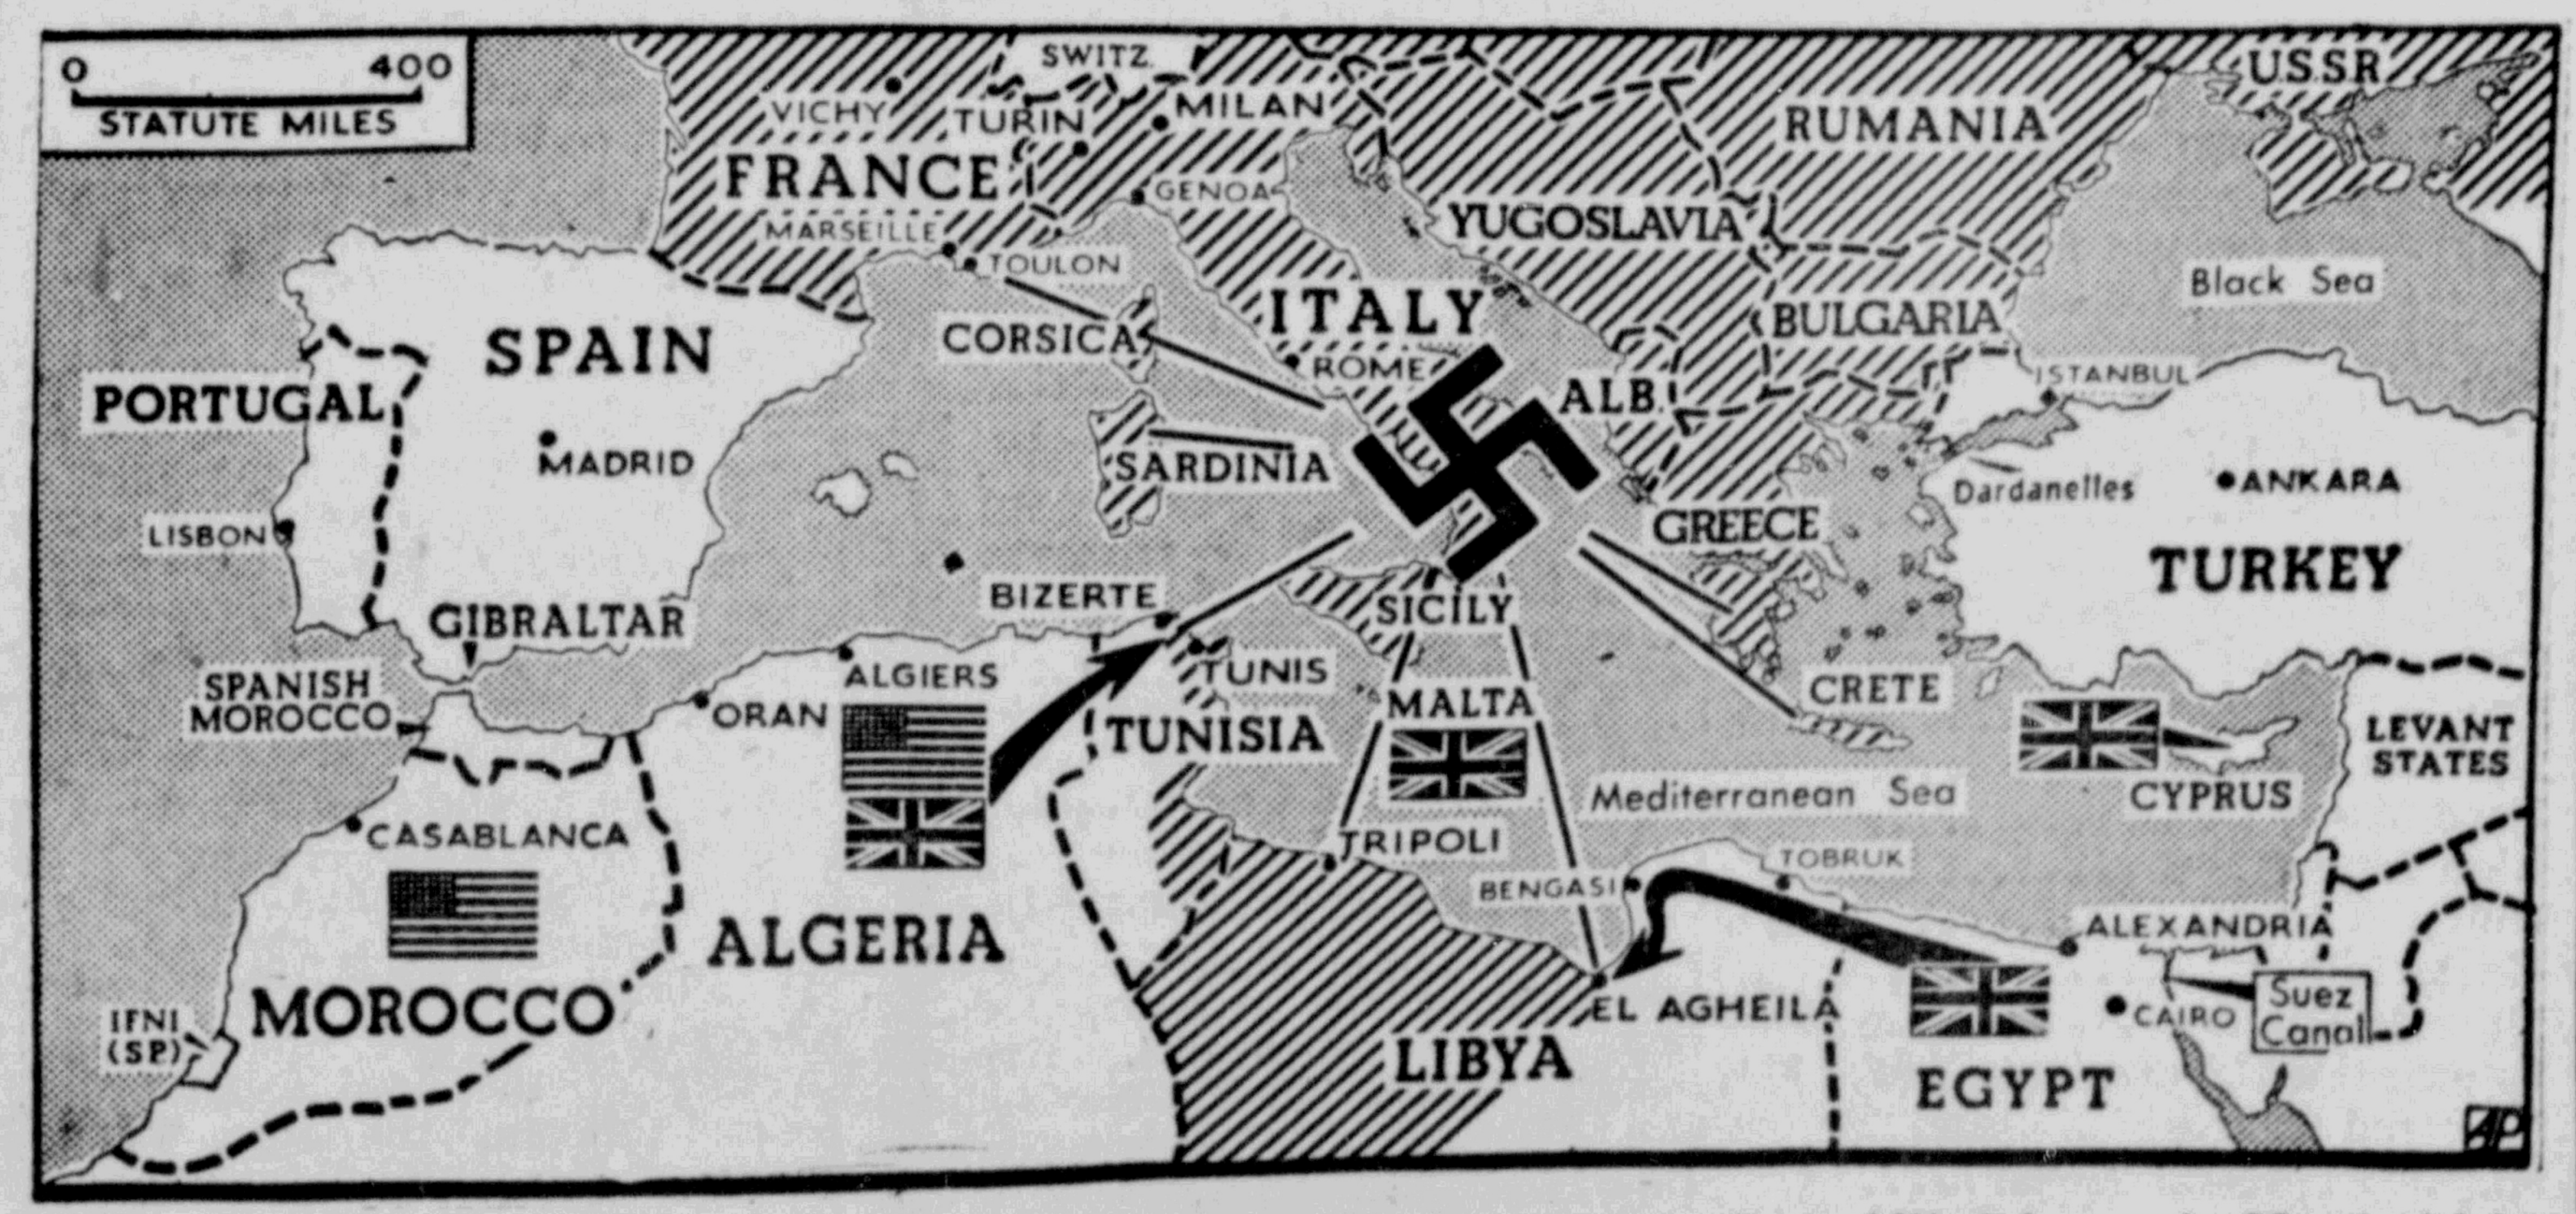
Consumers who have not filed applications for fuel oil rations must do so before December 14.

The rationing board today urged consumers not to call on the telephone as the office force will be kept busy finishing the processing and mailing of the coupons. The board urged that consumers defer their inquiries concerning the coupons until after next week.

Acts on Hunch

Palmer, Mass., Dec. 11 (AP)—Acting on the assumption that it would be easier to get meat in the woods than in a market, Mrs. Walter F. Robertson, a grandmother, acted on her hunch. She was right. She brought down a 125-pound spikehorn buck with her first shot.

Allies Set to Squeeze Axis in Mediterranean



Here's the strategic stage in the Mediterranean theatre of war where Allied forces in North Africa apparently are ready to launch new drives against the Axis in both Libya and Tunisia. In the west, British and American forces massed strength for an assault on Axis-held Tunis and Bizerte, and in the east the British reported that they were "allowing the enemy no rest in the El Agheila area." Flag symbols mark Allied holdings along the North African coast from Casablanca to Suez; black arrows indicate course of Allied drives. Shading indicates Axis-controlled territory, and lines radiating from Italy run to Axis-held bases guarding Europe's southern shores.

German Tanks Turn Allies' Right Flank And Advance Near Vital Road Junction; Second Tunisian Battleline Develops

German Column Is Forced Back After Artillery, Planes Get Into Action

Raff Is Leader

Col. Edson Raff Leads Picked American Forces

By JAMES M. LONG
(Associated Press War Editor)

Two German tank columns supported by infantry have launched turning attacks against the right flank of the Allies' Tunisian line, and Allied headquarters announced today that one had carried to with 2,000 yards of Medjez El Bab before being repulsed.

That vital road junction town 20 miles southwest of Tebourba and 35 miles southwest of Tunis has been in Allied hands since November 26.

The column which drove closest to Medjez El Bab came from the east and withdrew after encountering artillery and fighter plane fire, an Allied communique announced.

The Allies counter-attacked the other column, which struck from the north, but the outcome of this fight was not given.

French infantry and artillery helped repel the attacks, the communique disclosed.

"We lost a few tanks," it said. "Enemy losses were considerably higher."

The communique said:

"One column came down from the north along the west bank of the Medjerda. Our forces counterattacked immediately and destroyed a number of tanks.

"The other column, advancing from the east, came within 2,000 yards of Medjez El Bab, but when engaged by our artillery and fighter aircraft, withdrew. Several tanks were destroyed in the battle."

It was not disclosed how far the Nazi tank and infantry thrusts were thrown back, or what the new battle positions were along the Allied right flank.

A second Tunisian battlefront appeared to be taking form today as United States parachutists and tank forces struck toward the Gulf of Gabes, 150 miles south of the mired Tebourga front, and the Axis rushed troops by transport and glider train to meet them.

Other German forces pushed inland from their coastal bases of Sfax, Gabes and Sousse to meet the Americans whose swiftly developing thrust threatened to cut off the Axis-held bulge of Tunisia from Italian Tripolitania.

Supporting the picked American forces under command of Col. Edson Raff are French infantry, artillery and camel corps experts in desert war.

This is the mixed command which gave German advance troops a decisive licking last week near Tebessa in the Algerian-Tunisian border mountains 100 miles south of the Mediterranean, and then swept on toward the Gulf of Gabes 150 miles to the southeast.

In Russia the Red army reported further gains on the Stalingrad front despite the tightening of German defenses and the force of Nazi counterattacks.

Northwest of Moscow the pace of battle quickened as the Germans loosed one attack after another in an attempt to turn the northern flank of he Russian drive toward Velekie Luki, 90 miles from the Latvian frontier.

The Soviet information bureau said the intensity of these attacks gained the Germans some ground, but finally were checked.

"All attempts of the Germans to develop their successes were frustrated by our units," a Moscow communique said. "In these engagements the Germans suffered great losses in men and materials."

The Russians reported storming trenches and occupying strongly defended German lines in fierce hand-to-hand fighting on the Stalingrad front between the Volga and Don rivers.

Red Star said a large Russian rifle force outflanked strongly fortified Nazi positions in a group of hills northwest of Stalingrad and forced the Germans to retreat.

The army newspaper told of a battle that had raged for three days for a town southwest of Stalingrad where the Germans massed reserves in an attempt to halt the Russian onslaught.

The account described fighting for fortified brick houses, indicating that the town was of some size —perhaps Kotelnikovski on the Caucasus rail line 90 miles southwest of Stalingrad.

A British communique from Cairo said the British Eighth Army had not yet touched off its new offensive against the El Agheila line in Libya, but report-

Desert, Despite Its Scourges, Is Healthy for Army

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

With the British Eighth Army in Libya, Dec. 11 — When your boys who are fighting here in the United States Air Forces as allies of the British write home and tell strange tales of their lives in the desert, you need not smile indulgently and tuck their letters away among your souvenirs as bits of romancing.

As a matter of fact, it would take an extremely inventive imagination to concoct a story about this desert that did not have a suggestion of truth about it somewhere.

This is indeed a strange birthmark on our earth.

For instance, I am writing from an inhospitable zone where at times man literally could cook to death under the merciless sun. He might die for want of water, which does not exist hereabouts.

Yet I'm wearing British battle dress which is made of extremely heavy wool and buttons right to the chin. Underneath this load I have a wool jersey and it is a cold fact that I would give a good deal right now for an overcoat.

Tonight I shall all but freeze in my bed on the ground despite woolen pajamas, an eiderdown sleeping bag, several wool blankets and a raincoat piled on top.

You will encounter oceans of sand which stretch away to blazing horizons and you will see bones bleaching in this furnace. Out of this waste will arise the dread desert scourge of sandstorms which rip the skin from the face and fill the lungs to near suffocation with grinding particles.

Yet there are times when the desert is most attractive. In the spring the air is balmy and this normally arid hell-hole produces a great variety of lovely flowers.

This is winter but yesterday on a hillside where sand grudgingly gives way to determined bits of grass and shrubs I picked white daisies and buttercups which reminded me of my own sweet hills in Vermont.

Queer Animal Life

Queer and not infrequently deadly specimens of animal, serpent and insect life move about you.

I rubbed my eyes with amazement when I encountered a gray-coated kangaroo about six inches tall. He had big hind legs for jumping and absurd little front arms. His tail was long, with a bush at the end, and he had a handsome pair of butterfly ears.

No, I don't drink—but I was rather concerned for fear I was suffering from the heat until I was assured I had met with a kangaroo rat.

Here it may be said that scorpions and poisonous snakes afford far less pleasant experiences, especially when they invade your tent.

The strangest aspect of the desert is that here we find scores of thousands of men who endure nature's untold hardships in order to make war. My kangaroo rat isn't a patch on mankind for oddity.

Actually, while this war theatre is generally referred to broadly as "the desert," it is not by any means all drifting sand. There are many stretches of higher ground which produce shrubs and some grass. Then there is a consider-

Walker Is Choice To Succeed Flynn As Party Chairman

Capitol Hill Says F. D. R. Administration Favors Postmaster General to Avoid Fight

By JACK BELL

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP) — Reports circulated on capitol hill today that Postmaster General Frank C. Walker is the Roosevelt administration's choice to succeed Edward J. Flynn of New York as national chairman of the Democratic party.

Flynn has indicated he will step down from the party leadership early in January and behind-the-scenes attempts are being made to prevent a factional fight for the job which might rival the contest that culminated with the selection at St. Louis this week of Harrison Spangler of Iowa to head the Republican national committee.

Those in a position to know said the election of Walker to the Democratic leadership would be acceptable to President Roosevelt and most of his advisors and might prevent a threatened cleavage in the party.

The 56-year-old cabinet member, a long-time supporter of the president, has served as postmaster general since September, 1940, when he succeeded James A. Farley. If he also becomes Democratic national chairman, he would be following the precedent established by Farley and other postmaster generals before him.

Although Walker has been in the Roosevelt official family since he was named secretary of the President's executive council in 1933 and later executive director of the National Emergency Council, he has preserved his friendships with other party leaders, such as Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.). Walker is familiar with the work of the national committee, having served as its treasurer for a short time in 1932. Before his appointment as postmaster, he practiced law in New York city.

While it was indicated that the choice of Walker would be greeted with little enthusiasm on the part of members of Congress who have not always agreed with Mr. Roosevelt's political views, it was not believed likely that any open protest would be made.

Walker's name has been only one of several mentioned previously in general speculation about Flynn's successor. Among others were Leo Crowley, the alien property custodian and chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; Oscar L. Chapman, undersecretary of interior, and Oscar Ewing, a member of the national committee.

Stirrup Pumps, $1.91

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Those stirrup pumps the city's going to sell at wholesale will cost even less than was formerly announced. Purchase Commissioner Albert Pleydell said yesterday that the official OCD pumps, which have produced a heated dispute between the city and businessmen, would go at $1.91 flat, freight charges and sales tax included.

'Colloidal Fuel' Is Being Tested

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Experiments with a mixture of fuel oil and pulverized coal are underway here in an effort to increase the heating power of oil and effect a corresponding saving of supplies.

The "colloidal fuel," made up of 55 per cent fuel oil and 45 per cent pulverized bituminous coal, was fed to an industrial oil burner at the Metropolitan Petroleum Corporation yesterday in a demonstration before fuel experts and a consulting engineer of the New York Ordnance Division of the War Department.

Present plans envision commercial and industrial use of the fuel only, it was said.

No Date Is Set For End of W.P.A.

Herzog Tries to Correct Misunderstanding on February Closing

Albany, Dec. 11—No definite date has been set for the termination of WPA activities in the 57 counties comprising the upstate New York area, though the Federal work relief program must be concluded between now and the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

State WPA Administrator Lester W. Herzog said today that he desired to correct an apparent misunderstanding as to closing down of WPA in New York State, exclusive of New York City, February 1, an impression obviously created through misinterpretation of President Roosevelt's executive order which said that WPA would cease operation in certain states, the names of which have already been announced.

The closing date in the Upstate

Fort Lewis Army Officer Charged With Subversion

Man Mailed Seditious Literature to Pelley Silvershirts, Press Account Says

Seattle, Dec. 11 (AP)—A young, unidentified army officer at Fort Lewis, Wash., has been arrested in connection with a reported attempt to "vilify President Roosevelt" and form a subversive element within the army, the Post-Intelligence said today.

"It is understood," the newspaper said, "that the officer mailed seditious literature to members of the one-time America First Committee and to William Dudley Pelley's Silvershirts. The arrested officer likewise is reported to have attempted to organize a subversive organization within the army itself."

The Post-Intelligencer describer the officer as "a young man not long out of college and with a radical political background," and said he faces charges of sedition, "punishable by from 10 to 20 years in an army disciplinary barracks."

The foregoing story originally bore a "specific restriction" from the army authority at Fort Lewis saying it had been approved for publication provided nothing larger than a one-column headline were used. A storm of protest from the nation's editors resulted.

Later the Office of Censorship in Washington informed editors they could use the story without the restriction, saying "no authority exists to order any restriction of press headlines or typographical arrangements of any kind."

Col. R. Srnest Dupuy, chief of the Army Public Relations News Division in Washington, added that the War Department "is not issuing instructions to newspapers of the United States as to how they will handle news," and promised

Ensign Adrift 73 Hours in Life Jacket Lands at South Sea Eden in War Zone

By EUGENE BURNS

With the U. S. Fleet in the South Pacific, Dec. 3 (Delayed) (AP)—Bushy-haired native girls, clad only in knee-length skirts and smoking clay pipes, greeted plucky Ensign Jefferson H. (Tiny) Carroum, 21, of Smackover, Ark., when he reached their island after 73 hours adrift in a life jacket.

But, after what the bomber pilot had been through in the air and sea, his eyes were so swollen he scarcely could see to admire them.

Ensign Carroum's bomber fell into the sea after a bitter fight during which it started a Jap ship on its way to the bottom. The plane's rear gunner was believed lost.

For size, Tiny probably is one of the navy's smallest pilots. He barely stretches the required five feet four inches, but for stamina and courage he has proven himself among the best.

After the long, watery struggle for life, Tiny finally found a South Sea Garden of Eden within the war zone to compensate himself somewhat for scoring a direct hit on a large Japanese transport in the November 13-15 battle of Guadalcanal. (The transport subsequently sank).

He was forced to abandon his plane after it was hit by the anti-aircraft fire of an enemy cruiser, then was attacked by a Zero. It dropped into the ocean from 100 feet up when the engine quit. Tiny didn't have time to drop his landing flaps or slow up the plane.

"I was knocked out by the impact" with the water, Tiny explained. "The next thing I knew I was in water up to my knees in the cockpit. I managed to crawl out on a wing. When the plane went under, our liferaft caught

The class 3 coupons having a value of one gallon each for cooking and industrial use have been issued for a six-month period from October 1, 1942 to March 31, 1943. Consumers using these coupons should be careful in their use as they must last until the last of next March.

Consumers who have not filed applications for fuel oil rations must do so before December 14.

The rationing board today urged consumers not to call on the telephone as the office force will be kept busy finishing the processing and mailing of the coupons. The board urged that consumers defer their inquiries concerning the coupons until after next week.

Acts on Hunch

Desert, Despite Its Scourges, Is Healthy for Army

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

With the British Eighth Army in Libya, Dec. 11 — When your boys who are fighting here in the United States Air Forces as allies of the British write home and tell strange tales of their lives in the desert, you need not smile indulgently and tuck their letters away among your souvenirs as bits of romancing.

As a matter of fact, it would take an extremely inventive imagination to concoct a story about this desert that did not have a suggestion of truth about it somewhere.

This is indeed a strange birthmark on our earth.

For instance, I am writing from an inhospitable zone where at times man literally could cook to death under the merciless sun. He might die for want of water, which does not exist hereabouts.

Yet I'm wearing British battle dress which is made of extremely heavy wool and buttons right to the chin. Underneath this load I have a wool jersey and it is a cold fact that I would give a good deal right now for an overcoat.

Tonight I shall all but freeze in my bed on the ground despite woolen pajamas, an eiderdown sleeping bag, several wool blankets and a raincoat piled on top.

You will encounter oceans of sand which stretch away to blazing horizons and you will see bones bleaching in this furnace. Out of this waste will arise the dread desert scourge of sandstorms which rip the skin from the face and fill the lungs to near suffocation with grinding particles.

Yet there are times when the desert is most attractive. In the spring the air is balmy and this normally arid hell-hole produces a great variety of lovely flowers.

This is winter but yesterday on a hillside where sand grudgingly gives way to determined bits of grass and shrubs I picked white daisies and buttercups which reminded me of my own sweet hills in Vermont.

Queer Animal Life

Queer and not infrequently deadly specimens of animal, serpent and insect life move about you.

I rubbed my eyes with amazement when I encountered a gray-coated kangaroo about six inches tall. He had big hind legs for jumping and absurd little front arms. His tail was long, with a bush at the end, and he had a handsome pair of butterfly ears.

No, I don't drink—but I was rather concerned for fear I was suffering from the heat until I was assured I had met with a kangaroo rat.

Here it may be said that scorpions and poisonous snakes afford far less pleasant experiences, especially when they invade your tent.

The strangest aspect of the desert is that here we find scores of thousands of men who endure nature's untold hardships in order to make war. My kangaroo rat isn't a patch on mankind for oddity.

Actually, while this war theatre is generally referred to broadly as "the desert," it is not by any means all drifting sand. There are many stretches of higher ground which produce shrubs and some grass. Then there is a consider-

Walker Is Choice To Succeed Flynn As Party Chairman

Capitol Hill Says F. D. R. Administration Favors Postmaster General to Avoid Fight

By JACK BELL

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP) — Reports circulated on capitol hill today that Postmaster General Frank C. Walker is the Roosevelt administration's choice to succeed Edward J. Flynn of New York as national chairman of the Democratic party.

Flynn has indicated he will step down from the party leadership early in January and behind-the-scenes attempts are being made to prevent a factional fight for the job which might rival the contest that culminated with the selection at St. Louis this week of Harrison Spangler of Iowa to head the Republican national committee.

Those in a position to know said the election of Walker to the Democratic leadership would be acceptable to President Roosevelt and most of his advisors and might prevent a threatened cleavage in the party.

The 56-year-old cabinet member, a long-time supporter of the president, has served as postmaster general since September, 1940, when he succeeded James A. Farley. If he also becomes Democratic national chairman, he would be following the precedent established by Farley and other postmaster generals before him.

Although Walker has been in the Roosevelt official family since he was named secretary of the President's executive council in 1933 and later executive director of the National Emergency Council, he has preserved his friendships with other party leaders, such as Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.). Walker is familiar with the work of the national committee, having served as its treasurer for a short time in 1932. Before his appointment as postmaster, he practiced law in New York city.

While it was indicated that the choice of Walker would be greeted with little enthusiasm on the part of members of Congress who have not always agreed with Mr. Roosevelt's political views, it was not believed likely that any open protest would be made.

Walker's name has been only one of several mentioned previously in general speculation about Flynn's successor. Among others were Leo Crowley, the alien property custodian and chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; Oscar L. Chapman, undersecretary of interior, and Oscar Ewing, a member of the national committee.

Stirrup Pumps, $1.91

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Those stirrup pumps the city's going to sell at wholesale will cost even less than was formerly announced. Purchase Commissioner Albert Pleydell said yesterday that the official OCD pumps, which have produced a heated dispute between the city and businessmen, would go at $1.91 flat, freight charges and sales tax included.

'Colloidal Fuel' Is Being Tested

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Experiments with a mixture of fuel oil and pulverized coal are underway here in an effort to increase the heating power of oil and effect a corresponding saving of supplies.

The "colloidal fuel," made up of 55 per cent fuel oil and 45 per cent pulverized bituminous coal, was fed to an industrial oil burner at the Metropolitan Petroleum Corporation yesterday in a demonstration before fuel experts and a consulting engineer of the New York Ordnance Division of the War Department.

Present plans envision commercial and industrial use of the fuel only, it was said.

Herzog Tries to Correct Misunderstanding on February Closing

Albany, Dec. 11—No definite date has been set for the termination of WPA activities in the 57 counties comprising the upstate New York area, though the Federal work relief program must be concluded between now and the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

State WPA Administrator Lester W. Herzog said today that he desired to correct an apparent misunderstanding as to closing down of WPA in New York State, exclusive of New York City, February 1, an impression obviously created through misinterpretation of President Roosevelt's executive order which said that WPA would cease operation in certain states, the names of which have already been announced.

Fort Lewis Army Officer Charged With Subversion

Man Mailed Seditious Literature to Pelley Silvershirts, Press Account Says

Seattle, Dec. 11 (AP)—A young, unidentified army officer at Fort Lewis, Wash., has been arrested in connection with a reported attempt to "vilify President Roosevelt" and form a subversive element within the army, the Post-Intelligence said today.

"It is understood," the newspaper said, "that the officer mailed seditious literature to members of the one-time America First Committee and to William Dudley Pelley's Silvershirts. The arrested officer likewise is reported to have attempted to organize a subversive organization within the army itself."

The Post-Intelligencer describer the officer as "a young man not long out of college and with a radical political background," and said he faces charges of sedition, "punishable by from 10 to 20 years in an army disciplinary barracks."

The foregoing story originally bore a "specific restriction" from the army authority at Fort Lewis saying it had been approved for publication provided nothing larger than a one-column headline were used. A storm of protest from the nation's editors resulted.

Later the Office of Censorship in Washington informed editors they could use the story without the restriction, saying "no authority exists to order any restriction of press headlines or typographical arrangements of any kind."

Col. R. Ernest Dupuy, chief of the Army Public Relations News Division in Washington, added that the War Department "is not issuing instructions to newspapers of the United States as to how they will handle news," and promised

German Tanks Turn Allies' Right Flank And Advance Near Vital Road Junction; Second Tunisian Battleline Develops

German Column Is Forced Back After Artillery, Planes Get Into Action

Col. Edson Raff Leads Picked American Forces

By JAMES M. LONG
(Associated Press War Editor)

Two German tank columns supported by infantry have launched turning attacks against the right flank of the Allies' Tunisian line, and Allied headquarters announced today that one had carried to with 2,000 yards of Medjez El Bab before being repulsed.

That vital road junction town 20 miles southwest of Tebourba and 35 miles southwest of Tunis has been in Allied hands since November 26.

The column which drove closest to Medjez El Bab came from the east and withdrew after encountering artillery and fighter plane fire, an Allied communique announced.

The Allies counter-attacked the other column, which struck from the north, but the outcome of this fight was not given.

French infantry and artillery helped repel the attacks, the communique disclosed.

"We lost a few tanks," it said. "Enemy losses were considerably higher."

The communique said:

"One column came down from the north along the west bank of the Medjerda. Our forces counterattacked immediately and destroyed a number of tanks.

"The other column, advancing from the east, came within 2,000 yards of Medjez El Bab, but when engaged by our artillery and fighter aircraft, withdrew. Several tanks were destroyed in the battle."

It was not disclosed how far the Nazi tank and infantry thrusts were thrown back, or what the new battle positions were along the Allied right flank.

A second Tunisian battlefront appeared to be taking form today as United States parachutists and tank forces struck toward the Gulf of Gabes, 150 miles south of the mired Tebourga front, and the Axis rushed troops by transport and glider train to meet them.

Other German forces pushed inland from their coastal bases of Sfax, Gabes and Sousse to meet the Americans whose swiftly developing thrust threatened to cut off the Axis-held bulge of Tunisia from Italian Tripolitania.

Supporting the picked American forces under command of Col. Edson Raff are French infantry, artillery and camel corps experts in desert war.

This is the mixed command which gave German advance troops a decisive licking last week near Tebessa in the Algerian-Tunisian border mountains 100 miles south of the Mediterranean, and then swept on toward the Gulf of Gabes 150 miles to the southeast.

In Russia the Red army reported further gains on the Stalingrad front despite the tightening of German defenses and the force of Nazi counterattacks.

Northwest of Moscow the pace of battle quickened as the Germans loosed one attack after another in an attempt to turn the northern flank of he Russian drive toward Velekie Luki, 90 miles from the Latvian frontier.

The Soviet information bureau said the intensity of these attacks gained the Germans some ground, but finally were checked.

"All attempts of the Germans to develop their successes were frustrated by our units," a Moscow communique said. "In these engagements the Germans suffered great losses in men and materials."

The Russians reported storming trenches and occupying strongly defended German lines in fierce hand-to-hand fighting on the Stalingrad front between the Volga and Don rivers.

Red Star said a large Russian rifle force outflanked strongly fortified Nazi positions in a group of hills northwest of Stalingrad and forced the Germans to retreat.

The army newspaper told of a battle that had raged for three days for a town southwest of Stalingrad where the Germans massed reserves in an attempt to halt the Russian onslaught.

The account described fighting for fortified brick houses, indicating that the town was of some size—perhaps Kotelnikovski on the Caucasus rail line 90 miles southwest of Stalingrad.

A British communique from Cairo said the British Eighth Army had not yet touched off its new offensive against the El Agheila line in Libya, but report-

Ensign Adrift 73 Hours in Life Jacket Lands at South Sea Eden in War Zone

By EUGENE BURNS

With the U. S. Fleet in the South Pacific, Dec. 3 (Delayed) (AP)—Bushy-haired native girls, clad only in knee-length skirts and smoking clay pipes, greeted plucky Ensign Jefferson H. (Tiny) Carroum, 21, of Smackover, Ark., when he reached their island after 73 hours adrift in a life jacket.

But, after what the bomber pilot had been through in the air and sea, his eyes were so swollen he scarcely could see to admire them.

Ensign Carroum's bomber fell into the sea after a bitter fight during which it started a Jap ship on its way to the bottom. The plane's rear gunner was believed lost.

For size, Tiny probably is one of the navy's smallest pilots. He barely stretches the required five feet four inches, but for stamina and courage he has proven himself among the best.

After the long, watery struggle for life, Tiny finally found a South Sea Garden of Eden within the war zone to compensate himself somewhat for scoring a direct hit on a large Japanese transport in the November 13-15 battle of Guadalcanal. (The transport subsequently sank).

He was forced to abandon his plane after it was hit by the anti-aircraft fire of an enemy cruiser, then was attacked by a Zero. It dropped into the ocean from 100 feet up when the engine quit. Tiny didn't have time to drop his landing flaps or slow up the plane.

"I was knocked out by the impact" with the water, Tiny explained. "The next thing I knew I was in water up to my knees in the cockpit. I managed to crawl out on a wing. When the plane went under, our liferaft caught

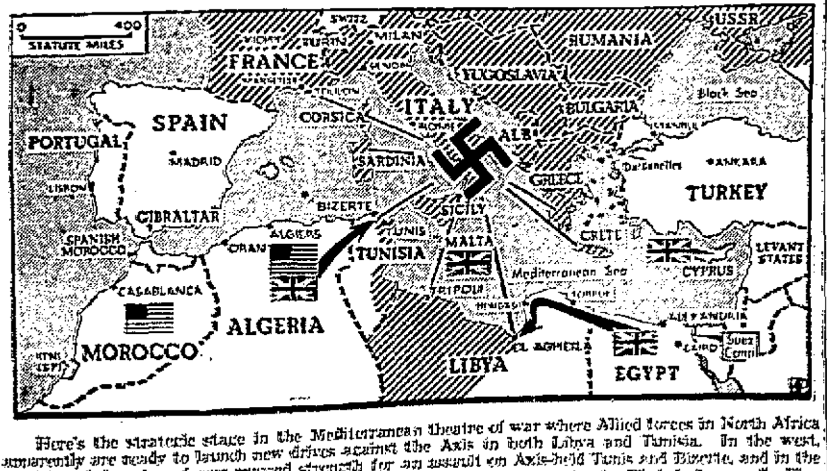
Allies Set to Squeeze Axis in Mediterranean



Here's the strategic stage in the Mediterranean theatre of war where Allied forces in North Africa apparently are ready to launch new drives against the Axis in both Libya and Tunisia. In the west, British and American forces massed strength for an assault on Axis-held Tunis and Bizerte, and in the east the British reported that they were "allowing the enemy no rest in the El Agheila area." Flag symbols mark Allied holdings along the North African coast from Casablanca to Suez. Black arrows indicate course of Allied drives. Shading indicates Axis-controlled territory, and lines radiating from Italy run to Axis-held bases guarding Europe's southern shores.

Extraordinary Grand Jury Meets to Consider Cases Of Two Accused of Bribery

Newburgh, N. Y., Dec. 11 (AP).—An extraordinary grand jury convened today to consider the cases of two men accused of bribing a scheduled woman witness for the state in the grand larceny-forgery trial of Samuel Nuzzo, former labor union officer.

The men, Harold Foster, 36, tavern owner, and Anthony Damiano, 35, identified as a former chauffeur for Nuzzo, are in jail in lieu of $10,000 bail each pending a hearing tomorrow. They were arraigned yesterday on charges of bribing Miss Jennie Utter, Middletown.

Meantime the state completed examination at Nuzzo's trial of Mrs. Helen Ronk McKay, Walden, said to have been a secretary to Nuzzo when he was business agent of Local 17, International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union (A. F. L.).

She identified yesterday a $707.49 check dated November 16, 1939 as one she had drawn to cash on instructions from Nuzzo although the stub purported to show it was made payable to Charles Rosner, Newburgh, for furniture.

She also testified that in September, 1940, she made out a $600 check for purchase of furniture, adding that she, Nuzzo and Anthony Damiano, said to be his former chauffeur, went to New York city, where $500 worth of furniture was bought.

Damiano, 35, Newburgh, and Harold Foster, 36, tavern owner, were arraigned yesterday on charges of bribing a state's witness, Miss Jennie Utter, Middletown, scheduled to appear at the Nuzzo trial. Assistant Attorney General Edward G. O'Neill described her as a friend of the defendant.

Information signed by State Police Sgt. John Quinn charges the two men, after the Nuzzo trial opened, induced Miss Utter to leave the state for Columbia, S. C. She was detained there and voluntarily returned to New York, O'Neill said. Damiano and Foster are in jail in lieu of $15,000 bail each pending a hearing tomorrow.

Nuzzo is on trial under two indictments charging misappropriation of $9,488 in funds of Local 17. The union claims 1,200 members, most of them employed on the $300,000,000 New York city water project.

New York area will depend entirely on conditions in the State between now and July 1, Herzog pointed out. However, all assistance being rendered by the WPA of the Federal Works Agency to other Federal agencies will be terminated by February 1, Herzog revealed, and the latter organizations have agreed to take over at that time projects which they have been sponsoring.

WPA's relationship with the various sponsors of work projects in Upstate New York has been uniformly satisfactory, Herzog said, and he wished to assure the sponsors' representatives that their projects would not be arbitrarily shut down.

"There will be an orderly termination of all projects in the upstate area." Herzog said "and every effort will be made to complete either the entire job or useful units thereof."

"WPA Area Superintendents have been ordered to contact local sponsors and the latter has the privilege of selecting projects on which they wish to concentrate," the WPA Administrator continued. "From past experience I know we will receive co-operation from the sponsors and there will be an orderly termination with few, if any, projects being left in an unsatisfactory condition."

Firemen Respond to Two Fires, Slight Damage

Kingston's fire department received a telephone call this morning that there was a house on fire on the Sawkill road. Excelsior Hose and Wiltwyck Hose were sent and found a chimney fire in the house of Casper Gerlach.

Thursday afternoon the fire department responded to a call for a fire at the Ashley welding plant at 58 Henry street. Some kindling wood and rubbish in the cellar had ignited from sparks from a blow torch on the first floor which had dropped into the rubbish. Damage was slight.

German Tanks Push Near Vital Highway Junction

ed that Axis forces were becoming increasingly jumpy as they awaited the onslaught.

"Although no major engagement has taken place," the communique said, "enemy reaction to constant activity of our patrols indicates his forward troops are in a state of some nervousness."

The Italians reported "more intensive activity" on the Libyan front and said, without specifying the sector, that Axis forces supported by planes had gained new positions in the Tunisian fighting.

A delayed Associated Press dispatch from an advanced Libyan airfield said the United States Black Scorpion, Fighting Cock and Penguin fighter squadrons moved up to a new base close to the El Agheila front three days ago.

On their first day there they downed seven Messerschmitts and brought their collective toll of Axis planes to 50.

Axis Uses Biggest Planes

The Axis was using its largest planes to speed men and supplies to the North African front.

The Cairo communique said long range fighters encountered a formation of six-engined planes yesterday north of Tripolitania and shot down one and damaged another.

These presumably were the new German Blohm and Voss 222's, giant flying boats capable of carrying 80 men with a range estimated at 4,500 miles.

Roads bogged by recent rains apparently still impeded land action in northern Tunisia, but Reuters reported a new outbreak of fighting near Tebourba where it said the Germans launched new tank attacks against allied lines.

In most places, however, the latest dispatches told of only patrol activity.

Despite this delay and the German resistance which checked the allied advance toward Bizerte and Tunis a week ago, an allied spokesman declared that the British and American forces were still ahead of schedule.

Even with the earlier German supremacy in the air, American and British fighters were said to have been shooting down two planes for every one they lost.

Some British sources estimated that the Germans had drawn 1,000 planes from western Europe and Russia. They said, however, that allied fighters had whittled down this force, while at the same time new British and American planes were streaming up to advanced air bases in a steady flow.

These sources estimated that on the ground British and American forces along the Tebourba-Mateur front and Axis troops defending that line were currently of about even strength.

German broadcasts disclosed bit by bit that Adolf Hitler's favorites have been boosted to the top of the Nazi high command over the established old guard of militarists.

Following the announcement yesterday that Gen. Kurt Zeitzler, erstwhile Gestapo representative, had replaced the veteran Gen. Franz Halder as chief of the German army general staff, Berlin broadcasts disclosed that two other relatively little-known men are holding the positions of chief of staff of the air force and the navy.

The air force chief of staff is Col. Gen. Hans Jesschonnek, who at the start of the war was only a colonel and now, at 44, is the youngest colonel general in the German armed forces.

The navy chief of staff is an Admiral Friche, who was not identified even by first name in the German broadcast.

Buildings Heated By Oil Must Be Converted Jan. 5

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Commercial buildings heated by fuel oil must be converted to other heating by January 5, or prove to local ration boards that conversion was impossible, the Regional Office of Price Administration said today.

Under the present rationing setup, oil heated buildings have been given allotments for two periods ending January 5. Thereafter, the OPA declared, the burden of proof that conversion was impossible rests upon the building owner.

To step up conversion, three Federal War Agencies have joined forces to effect a procedure now being tried in New England. If it proves effective there, the OPA said, it probably would be extended to other states where fuel oil is rationed.

The plan involves the cooperation of the OPA, the War Production Board and the Petroleum Administration for war, formerly known as the Office of Petroleum Coordinator.

If the applicant for renewal of a fuel oil allotment fails to prove satisfactorily that conversion was impossible, the OPA would not certify the application and the petroleum adiministration would deny renewal.

To facilitate conversion in instances requiring the use of materials essential to the war effort, the OPA would assist the building owner in determining what materials were needed.

The OPA and petroleum administration then would certify the request for materials to the WPB, which would arrange to make available the materials for conversion.

The Regional OPA office said it could not estimate the number of buildings affected by conversion orders, either in New England or in other Atlantic coast states.

Drinking Is Blamed

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 11 (AP)—A medical examiner's report today blamed drinking by the engineer for the New York Central train wreck, in which two men were killed, at Croton river bridge on November 11. The engineer, Jacob Kisselbach of Albany, and a fireman, Walter Bombard of Brooklyn, were killed when an express mail train ran through five stop signals and crashed into a standing fast freight train. Medical Examiner Amos O. Squire said that Kisselbach "was in an unfit condition to operate his train at the time of the accident" and that an autopsy disclosed that the alcohol content of the engineer's blood was enough to make him "incautious."

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Seasonal influences, as much as anything else, continued to keep today's stock market under wraps.

Attempts to choose a definite direction were unsuccessful at the start and, in relatively slow dealings, mild irregularity prevailed near the fourth hour.

While tax offerings still were light, Wall Streeters recalled that such account adjustments usually have resulted in a downward shift during the greater part of December. Many potential bidders, consequently, remained in the background on the idea they might acquire favorites at lower levels before the end of the month. The war news again provided scant stimulation marketwise.

Battered Cruiser Reaches Port Under Own Power

San Francisco, Dec. 11 (AP).—The battered cruiser San Francisco, which fought and whipped a Japanese battleship in an epic engagement off the Solomons last month, plowed in through the Golden Gate under her own power today.

The ship which survived one of the most amazing chapters in modern naval history, came in for repairs and, incidentally, for the homage of her proud home port and the nation at large. She is the first American combat vessel of the war for which a decoration has been designated for gallantry in action.

The Navy said the San Francisco would dock this afternoon and civic and military authorities were to go aboard for brief welcoming ceremonies (2 p. m. Pacific War Time). Stories of her exploits were to be broadcast nationally from her wounded decks (3 p. m.).

The ship was in command of Capt. Albert F. France, Jr., of New York city.

Divine Loses His Chance To Appeal Court Ruling

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Father Divine has lost all chance to appeal from a supreme court ruling ordering him to pay $100 a week in earthly money toward a $5,949 judgment obtained against him by a former "Angel" in his self-created heaven.

The negro cult leader, now living in Philadelphia, yesterday was denied by the Court of Appeals the right to appeal to that court.

Mrs. Verinda Brown obtained the judgment nearly three years ago for property turned over to Father Divine during her discipleship.

The order for the $100 payments was handed down last June and affirmed later by the Appellate division.

In August, an order was issued holding the cultist in contempt of court for not meeting the initial installments. But Father Divine moved to Philadelphia, coming to New York only on Sundays when civil process may not be served.

Caracas, Venezuela, is to have a large new commercial center, including stores, a post office, a movie theatre and similar establishments.

Real Estate Head Sees 'Tidal Wave' Of Regimentation

The American people are faced with a "tidal wave" of government regimentation and bureaucratic control that threatens to bury private enterprise and personal liberty, warned A. N. Groves of Syracuse, newly elected president of the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards in his inaugural address at the DeWitt Clinton Hotel in Albany today.

Stating that it is "unpatriotic to accept ill-advised and unwarranted government regulations blindly and meekly," Mr. Groves called upon members to exercise their democratic right to criticise and fight unnecessary regulation of private business and unnecessary expansion of bureaucratic control.

To cope with these problems, the state realty group has set up a War Emergency Committee, Mr. Groves announced. This committee, he said, will do both militant and informative work, and provide a clearing house for thought on emergency issues, serving as a medium through which the "vast real estate interests of New York state may have a more effective voice and influence, both in the state and in the nation. Each real estate board in the state, he said, is cooperating in the drive to enlist support for the War Emergency Committee.

Other officers of the state association installed with Mr. Groves were: Vice Presidents Henry G. Waltemade, Bronx, and William J. Gilliland, Long Island: Treasurer, Horace Carpenter, Jr., Buffalo; Secretary, Kenneth H. Clapp, Westchester, and Executive Vice President, Ray Hofford, Albany.

Ralph W. Arend of Utica was installed as chairman of the New York State Society of Real Estate Appraisers, a professional division of the association, with John D. Tighe of Rochester and E. J. Crawford, New York, vice chairmen.

Mr. Groves announced the appointment of five regional vice presidents of the association also. They are: Mr. Tighe of Rochester, western New York district, Allen S. Baker, Rome, central New York; Tom Rogers of Glens Falls, Capital district; Clarence W. Olcott, Scarsdale, lower Hudson district, and Walter S. Dayton of Bayside, metropolitan New York district.

In his address, Mr. Groves went on to point out that "we are living in a period of administrative law. Administrators of scores of alphabetical bureaus have power to issue orders that have all the effect of law, but do not require legislative approval.

"I do not maintain that some restrictions and regulations are not needed during war time," he added, "but I do maintain that many of them are unnecessary and not only fail to contribute to the war effort, but actually deter it by undermining basic civilian economy and drawing manpower from productive work into swollen government bureaus."

As an example of "unwarranted regulation," Mr. Groves cited the recent O. P. A. ruling which requires a one-third cash down payment in the sale of tenant-occupied houses.

"Certain other aspects of rent control, "he said, "give us further examples of unwarranted regulation. The voluminous reports, the army of employes with which O. P. A. has gone into rent control lead one to wonder just how temporary this regulation may be.

"I have no criticism of local rent directors and their offices," he was careful to emphasize. "They are trying to do their jobs in accordance with the O. P. A. orders. Unfortunately, they do not have sufficient discretionary power to handle individual cases on their merits. Washington dictates all the rules and insists on technical compliance.

"It has frequently been stated," said Mr. Long, "that internal criticism is not sufficient to bring about good administration. What is most needed is criticism from without—from laymen, organizations, businessmen, professions, and labor."

Adirondack Mail Lass Could Give Advice to Santa

Old Forge, N. Y., Dec. 11 (AP)—If Santa Claus needs some practical advice on travel in the heart of the Adirondack mountains this season, Ann Gibbs—18, pretty, blond and popular—is the girl who can give it to him.

Without his advantage of a sleigh and reindeer, she drives 108 miles a day through one of the east's heaviest snow belts delivering mail over a route her father left for war work.

The jolly old gent with the whiskers and pack is about the only one who could really sympathize with Ann's daily schedule, and she regards her task much the same way he does his annual excursion. When blizzards close roads and the snow piles higher than the running boards of her truck, she tells the postmaster:

"I promised to do this job, and I'm going to do it. I like to get letters and nice parcels and I know other people do too, so as long as I'm holding down this job I'll see that they get them."

She does, too. She carries a pair of skis and frequently uses them to reach an isolated camp, lugging a mail sack on her back, when the truck cannot get through.

Ann weighs 120 pounds. Occasionally some of the sacks on her truck are as heavy. Her loads range as high as 30 sacks, but she makes two round-trips daily between Old Forge and Raquette Lake, 54 miles each trip.

Ann applied—begged, in fact—for the job last June after she was graduated from high school. Her father, who was the regular carrier, had gone to work at the Rome air depot and her brother was in the army.

Coming in from a runover roads that give even snow plows plenty of trouble, she says:

I like my job better than anything I've ever done, and I'm not certain I'll let dad have it back when he comes home."

Extraordinary Grand Jury Meets to Consider Cases Of Two Accused of Bribery

Newburgh, N. Y., Dec. 11 (AP).—An extraordinary grand jury convened today to consider the cases of two men accused of bribing a scheduled woman witness for the state in the grand larceny-forgery trial of Samuel Nuzzo, former labor union officer.

The men, Harold Foster, 36, tavern owner, and Anthony Damiano, 35, identified as a former chauffeur for Nuzzo, are in jail in lieu of $10,000 bail each pending a hearing tomorrow. They were arraigned yesterday on charges of bribing Miss Jennie Utter, Middletown.

Meantime the state completed examination at Nuzzo's trial of Mrs. Helen Ronk McKay, Walden, said to have been a secretary to Nuzzo when he was business agent of Local 17, International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union (A. F. L.).

She identified yesterday a $707.49 check dated November 16, 1939 as one she had drawn to cash on instructions from Nuzzo although the stub purported to show it was made payable to Charles Rosner, Newburgh, for furniture.

She also testified that in September, 1940, she made out a $600 check for purchase of furniture, adding that she, Nuzzo and Anthony Damiano, said to be his former chauffeur, went to New York city, where $500 worth of furniture was bought.

Damiano, 35, Newburgh, and Harold Foster, 36, tavern owner, were arraigned yesterday on charges of bribing a state's witness, Miss Jennie Utter, Middletown, scheduled to appear at the Nuzzo trial. Assistant Attorney General Edward G. O'Neill described her as a friend of the defendant.

Information signed by State Police Sgt. John Quinn charges the two men, after the Nuzzo trial opened, induced Miss Utter to leave the state for Columbia, S. C. She was detained there and voluntarily returned to New York, O'Neill said. Damiano and Foster are in jail in lieu of $15,000 bail each pending a hearing tomorrow.

Nuzzo is on trial under two indictments charging misappropriation of $9,488 in funds of Local 17. The union claims 1,200 members, most of them employed on the $300,000,000 New York city water project.

No Date Is Set For End of W.P.A.

New York area will depend entirely on conditions in the State between now and July 1, Herzog pointed out. However, all assistance being rendered by the WPA of the Federal Works Agency to other Federal agencies will be terminated by February 1, Herzog revealed, and the latter organizations have agreed to take over at that time projects which they have been sponsoring.

WPA's relationship with the various sponsors of work projects in Upstate New York has been uniformly satisfactory, Herzog said, and he wished to assure the sponsors' representatives that their projects would not be arbitrarily shut down.

"There will be an orderly termination of all projects in the upstate area," Herzog said "and every effort will be made to complete either the entire job or useful units thereof."

"WPA Area Superintendents have been ordered to contact local sponsors and the latter has the privilege of selecting projects on which they wish to concentrate," the WPA Administrator continued. "From past experience I know we will receive co-operation from the sponsors and there will be an orderly termination with few, if any, projects being left in an unsatisfactory condition."

Firemen Respond to Two Fires, Slight Damage

Kingston's fire department received a telephone call this morning that there was a house on fire on the Sawkill road. Excelsior Hose and Wiltwyck Hose were sent and found a chimney fire in the house of Casper Gerlach.

Thursday afternoon the fire department responded to a call for a fire at the Ashley welding plant at 58 Henry street. Some kindling wood and rubbish in the cellar had ignited from sparks from a blow torch on the first floor which had dropped into the rubbish. Damage was slight.

German Tanks Push Near Vital Highway Junction

ed that Axis forces were becoming increasingly jumpy as they awaited the onslaught.

"Although no major engagement has taken place," the communique said, "enemy reaction to constant activity of our patrols indicates his forward troops are in a state of some nervousness."

The Italians reported "more intensive activity" on the Libyan front and said, without specifying the sector, that Axis forces supported by planes had gained new positions in the Tunisian fighting.

A delayed Associated Press dispatch from an advanced Libyan airfield said the United States Black Scorpion, Fighting Cock and Penguin fighter squadrons moved up to a new base close to the El Agheila front three days ago.

On their first day there they downed seven Messerschmitts and brought their collective toll of Axis planes to 50.

Axis Uses Biggest Planes

The Axis was using its largest planes to speed men and supplies to the North African front.

The Cairo communique said long range fighters encountered a formation of six-engined planes yesterday north of Tripolitania and shot down one and damaged another.

These presumably were the new German Blohm and Voss 222's, giant flying boats capable of carrying 80 men with a range estimated at 4,500 miles.

Roads bogged by recent rains apparently still impeded land action in northern Tunisia, but Reuters reported a new outbreak of fighting near Tebourba where it said the Germans launched new tank attacks against allied lines.

In most places, however, the latest dispatches told of only patrol activity.

Despite this delay and the German resistance which checked the allied advance toward Bizerte and Tunis a week ago, an allied spokesman declared that the British and American forces were still ahead of schedule.

Even with the earlier German supremacy in the air, American and British fighters were said to have been shooting down two planes for every one they lost.

Some British sources estimated that the Germans had drawn 1,000 planes from western Europe and Russia. They said, however, that allied fighters had whittled down this force, while at the same time new British and American planes were streaming up to advanced air bases in a steady flow.

These sources estimated that on the ground British and American forces along the Tebourba-Mateur front and Axis troops defending that line were currently of about even strength.

German broadcasts disclosed bit by bit that Adolf Hitler's favorites have been boosted to the top of the Nazi high command over the established old guard of militarists.

Following the announcement yesterday that Gen. Kurt Zeitzler, erstwhile Gestapo representative, had replaced the veteran Gen. Franz Halder as chief of the German army general staff, Berlin broadcasts disclosed that two other relatively little-known men are holding the positions of chief of staff of the air force and the navy.

The air force chief of staff is Col. Gen. Hans Jesschonneck, who at the start of the war was only a colonel and now, at 44, is the youngest colonel general in the German armed forces.

The navy chief of staff is an Admiral Friche, who was not identified even by first name in the German broadcast.

Buildings Heated By Oil Must Be Converted Jan. 5

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Commercial buildings heated by fuel oil must be converted to other heating by January 5, or prove to local ration boards that conversion was impossible, the Regional Office of Price Administration said today.

Under the present rationing setup, oil heated buildings have been given allotments for two periods ending January 5. Thereafter, the OPA declared, the burden of proof that conversion was impossible rests upon the building owner.

To step up conversion, three Federal War Agencies have joined forces to effect a procedure now being tried in New England. If it proves effective there, the OPA said, it probably would be extended to other states where fuel oil is rationed.

The plan involves the cooperation of the OPA, the War Production Board and the Petroleum Administration for war, formerly known as the Office of Petroleum Coordinator.

If the applicant for renewal of a fuel oil allotment fails to prove satisfactorily that conversion was impossible, the OPA would not certify the application and the petroleum administration would deny renewal.

To facilitate conversion in instances requiring the use of materials essential to the war effort, the OPA would assist the building owner in determining what materials were needed.

The OPA and petroleum administration then would certify the request for materials to the WPB, which would arrange to make available the materials for conversion.

The Regional OPA office said it could not estimate the number of buildings affected by conversion orders, either in New England or in other Atlantic coast states.

Drinking Is Blamed

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 11 (AP)—A medical examiner's report today blamed drinking by the engineer for the New York Central train wreck, in which two men were killed, at Croton river bridge on November 11. The engineer, Jacob Kisselbach of Albany, and a fireman, Walter Bombard of Brooklyn, were killed when an express mail train ran through five stop signals and crashed into a standing fast freight train. Medical Examiner Amos O. Squire said that Kisselbach "was in an unfit condition to operate his train at the time of the accident" and that an autopsy disclosed that the alcohol content of the engineer's blood was enough to make him "incautious."

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Seasonal influences, as much as anything else, continued to keep today's stock market under wraps.

Attempts to choose a definite direction were unsuccessful at the start and, in relatively slow dealings, mild irregularity prevailed near the fourth hour.

While tax offerings still were light, Wall Streeters recalled that such account adjustments usually have resulted in a downward shift during the greater part of December. Many potential bidders, consequently, remained in the background on the idea they might acquire favorites at lower levels before the end of the month. The war news again provided scant stimulation marketwise.

Secondary rail bonds improved and commodities advanced.

Among resistant stocks were American Telephone, Western Union, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Chesapeake & Ohio, Standard Oil (N. J.), Allied Chemical, J. I. Case, Anaconda, Montgomery Ward and U. S. Battered Cruiser Reaches Port Under Own Power

San Francisco, Dec. 11 (AP).—The battered cruiser San Francisco, which fought and whipped a Japanese battleship in an epic engagement off the Solomons last month, plowed in through the Golden Gate under her own power today.

The ship which survived one of the most amazing chapters in modern naval history, came in for repairs and, incidentally, for the homage of her proud home port and the nation at large. She is the first American combat vessel of the war for which a decoration has been designated for gallantry in action.

The Navy said the San Francisco would dock this afternoon and civic and military authorities were to go aboard for brief welcoming ceremonies (2 p. m. Pacific War Time). Stories of her exploits were to be broadcast nationally from her wounded decks (3 p. m.).

The ship was in command of Capt. Albert F. France, Jr., of New York city.

Divine Loses His Chance To Appeal Court Ruling

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Father Divine has lost all chance to appeal from a supreme court ruling ordering him to pay $100 a week in earthly money toward a $5,949 judgment obtained against him by a former "Angel" in his self-created heaven.

The negro cult leader, now living in Philadelphia, yesterday was denied by the Court of Appeals the right to appeal to that court.

Mrs. Verinda Brown obtained the judgment nearly three years ago for property turned over to Father Divine during her discipleship.

The order for the $100 payments was handed down last June and affirmed later by the Appellate division.

In August, an order was issued holding the cultist in contempt of court for not meeting the initial installments. But Father Divine moved to Philadelphia, coming to New York only on Sundays when civil process may not be served.

Caracas, Venezuela, is to have a large new commercial center, including stores, a post office, movie theatre and similar establishments.

STOUT-HEARTED NORWAY

Norway, which is as valiant in its downfall as any nation ever was in victory, is speaking noble words to Americans through Dr. Carl J. Hambro, former president of the Norwegian parliament. Addressing an audience of American business men, he tells of the role our own nation must play in this world crisis. He trusts his country's destiny with America.

"We who speak for the small nations," he says, "realize that the eight points of the Atlantic Charter cannot be based on fictitious ideas, as was the League of Nations. We know that the large powers with great populations must have greater authority than the small nations, and not an equal vote.

"Small nations will have to give up some of the old ideas of national sovereignty — ideas that hardly exist in the world today. We want any future world order to be based on fact, not fiction, and we of the small nations are ready to make the necessary sacrifices.

The great pre-occupation of the Norwegian people today is that there be no appeasement. The only thing they fear is a premature peace before the enemy is thoroughly defeated."

That tough little nation of 3,000,000 free men in bondage is "taking it" today as only those can do who have stout hearts and live without fear. There'll always be a Norway, and Norway shall be free. That is one of the things America is fighting for.

DISUNITY IN AFRICA

President Roosevelt, in the Army and Navy Journal, praises initiative and enterprise shown on American fighting fronts as "the outcome of thoughtful estimate made not by nightmarish amateurs, but by military men whose lives have been consecrated to a study of war."

"An outstanding example of their labors," he continues, "is the brilliant campaign under way in North Africa." He adds: "The dominant note of our common war effort is unity of our people and unity of the United Nations. That is the hard fact which is the spearhead of victory. Upon the battlefields of the seas and the continents across them, our crews and troops are cooperating with the efficiency of well trained and disciplined teams. Coral Sea, Midway, the Solomons, New Guinea and North Africa are shining instances of their power."

This is all reassuring except for one fact not mentioned, which mars the harmony and might become serious. It is the complex situation now existing in North Africa. That vast and vital area has been pacified, but its unity is strange and incomplete. A bold French leader of doubtful past and doubtful purpose, Admiral Darlan, has taken over the government of all French North Africa and seems to be consolidating it in his own name, for permanent rule. He does this with the blessing of General Eisenhower, American commander in Africa.

But the British forces in that area, who have borne the heat and burden of the day, and have probably done more than our own country to save Africa as a stepping stone to Europe—they refuse to recognize Darlan in any capacity, because they do not trust him. That little "rift within the lute" might yet make a lot of trouble.

WOMEN AND GRAVITY

What's the matter with women? This, perhaps the oldest conversational topic of the human race, has now received a partial answer. If it does not settled all the unsolved problems about femininity, it at least explains why they can do certain physical tasks better than others.

Their center of gravity is too low, says Prof. Granny Johnson of Denver University. By that he means that their weight is around the hips, whereas a man's is in his chest. A woman's heart is smaller than a man's. (No wisecrack intended). That is why she can never hope to run as fast as a man, or compete with him in other forms of athletics. In tests of endurance that do not require an extensive breathing apparatus, such as standing for a long time while nursing an invalid, women can take it much better than men. Perhaps long association with men has been calculated to give women endurance.

NIBBLING

"I am nibbling them." So General Joffre, first French commander-in-chief in the last war, explained his plan of wearing down the Germans by petty attacks here and there. Ultimately he hoped, on the Scottish principle that "many a mickle makes a muckle," that the little dents in the German lines would become big ones, and finally a breakthrough would become possible.

This strategy seems to be repeated in the Solomons. With naval forces inferior to the Japanese, we are wearing them down by submarine attacks, picking off a destroyer here and a cargo ship there. As the Japanese have less ability to replace lost ships than we do, every missing vessel is for them a calamity.

In all this, our own losses are apparently kept light. Even in the out-and-out battles we have lost less than our enemies. That is where Joffre failed. His theory was sound, but in practice he lost too many men in attempting insignificant dents. Admiral Nimitz appears to have profited from his example.

Perhaps the sharpest crack in the war is Churchill's remark that the German troops in Russia "have the consolation of knowing that they have been commanded and led not by the German general staff, but by Corporal Hitler himself."

Who would have thought the old-fashioned dump-heap could win the war?

Our new aristocracy: the holders of cards entitling them to extra gasoline.

The hitching post and watering trough may yet return.

Don't gripe about the cold weather—think of those Russian troops.

They're fighting on camels in Tunisia—but no puns, please!

Remember when we used to think the Japs were cute?

THAT BODY OF YOURS

CALCIUM AND VITAMIN D

A British naval officer visiting America some years ago remarked that with all our automobiles, fur coats and good food, there were too many knock-kneed, bowlegged, pigeon-chested children to be seen and yet Newfoundland cod liver oil was as good as any available.

Should this officer visit us now he would find that these bowlegged, pigeon-chested, pot-bellied children are not a common sight any more; in fact practically none is found in children's hospitals.

This ailment is called rachitis or rickits and is due to an insufficient amount of lime in the body. This lack may be due to not enough being present in the foods eaten or in the amount of cod liver oil given, or that the body for some reason is not able to use the lime or calcium that is taken into the body.

Because there are not these deformed children about us, we are apt to think that all children are now getting enough calcium or vitamin D. Unfortunately there are still many children who are not reeciving enough calcium or vitamin D because this is the only vitamin not found in large enough amounts in the average diet.

The outstanding symptom in these children whose diet is deficient in calcium is restlessness, tantrums, poor appetite, and sleeplessness. They are thin and much underweight and have poor muscular development. They are as bright as the average but because of their general weakness may not do well at school. They seem to be always tired despite their restlessness and desire to go places and do things. They are seldom happy.

From the above it can be seen that the first thought in treatment is foods containing calcium—milk, cereals, green vegetables and vitamin D in the form of cod liver oil or viosterol but as this may take some weeks to be effective, the daily habits of the child must be supervised.

The parents must insist on plenty of rest at night with some rest during the day, so much time for study and so much time for play, allowing no pleadings or coaxings to interfere with the day's program.

The reason that vitamin D is used in the treatment of these cases is that it has much to do with the use of calcium and phosphorus in the body. Every cell in the body must have calcium to enable it to live and do its work.

Protection For Small Investors Babson Urges More Intelligent Use Of Proxies

New York City, Dec. 11—It certainly gets my goat to have letters from small investors complaining that everyone is against them and that they are being robbed and persecuted. No group of people have better protection than have the small investors. In addition to the Securities and Exchange Commission, there are Blue-Sky Laws for nearly every state and a host of other laws thrown in for good measure. Today I especially want to write of the importance of the proxy and the power which small investors have in connection therewith.

Proxies Contain Power

Most of the attempts to help small investors have been by legislation. One of the crying appeals is to have salaries of corporation officials reduced. To satisfy public clamour, this is now being done so that the presidents of the largest corporations will receive no more than the heads of certain labor unions! Yet, out of 130,000,000 people in the United States, only 3,000 are affected by such legislation and their total salaries amount to less than 1/100 of 1% of the total dividends. Most of the other legislation for which small investors are asking can have a very little affect upon dividends. More legislation is not the answer to the problems of the small investor.

While investors are complaining, they, themselves, hold the cure for their troubles. I refer to the proxies which are sent out once a year and which 95% of investors sign like blind monkeys. Hence, the question:—Should a small investor ever sign a proxy unless the dividends received and the company's general policy are satisfactory to him? Certainly, investors who blindly sign and return proxies have no standing in court.

Investors Are Very Lazy

I know of no company whose stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange where the directors and their friends own a majority of the stock. In most cases all the directors combined own only about 5% of the stock. The balance of the stock is usually distributed through thousands or perhaps a 100,000 small stockholders. I am not advising it, but I do say that if you and other small stockholders would only go on a "sit-down" strike and sign no proxies for awhile it would be impossible to hold the next Annual Meeting. Then the management would frantically write and ask you what is the reason for your not sending in to them your proxy. You would then have a chance to tell them. I promise you the result would be better dividends on your stock.

In other words, small investors, in order to get results, do not need to go to Washington or hire a lawyer, or do anything else but refuse to vote. Of course, if the president of the corporation writes and asks you what the trouble is and you are too lazy to answer the letter, then the fault will be squarely up to you. Unfortunately, I fear too many small investors are too lazy to write corporation officials and tell them what they want.

Family Companies Need a Shaking

Too much stock of most corporations is held by children, grandchildren and trustees who have no knowledge of the business. The stock has descended to these people who did nothing to deserve it. It almost seems as if too many companies are being operated from cemeteries rather than from efficient offices. Yet, on the votes of these "old friends" too many managements depend. These dry bones need to be shaken and this can best be done by the small stockholders. If investors would only appreciate the power of the proxy, their dividends received would increased and the value of their stocks would go up. This especially is true in the case of certain utility and insurance companies operated under management contracts.

All of this means that if you are satisfied that the companies in which you have your money invested are being honestly and efficiently operated and are paying a fair rate of dividend, then sign and return the proxies which are mailed to you. On the other hand, if you are disatisfied, do not depend upon the Government or anyone else to help you out. Refuse to sign any proxy but instead write the company that you want the directors to give you better results before you will permit them to be re-elected.

Independent Proxy Committee

One difficulty with Germany, Italy, and Japan is that they have only one political party. The hope of the United States and the other democracies lies with the two-party system. The German, if he goes to the polls, must vote for Hitler. There is no opposition party for whom he can vote. Those of us who are citizens of the United States can go to the polls and vote for the party in power or can vote for the opposition. This means that a nation is much safer and certainly the citizens are better off, when there is a strong opposition party.

The same principle applies to corporations. Most corporations are today operated on the Nazi system with one party and one ballot,—the ballot being printed so as to keep in power the present management. The future hope of the American investor is to develop the two-party system with two ballots offered for each Annual Meeting,—one endorsing the present management and the other appealing for a change in management. When such a voting system exists, you will see better earnings, larger dividends and higher stock prices.

Conclusion

Of course, I'll be severely criticized by many corporation officials for taking investors into my confidence this way. These managements are dependent on their salaries; many of them are getting so old that they cannot get a job elsewhere. Hence, they resent any interference by a "poor country boy" like me. Furthermore, I have hesitated a long time before speaking out in meeting in this way. At last, however, I am determined to do so. Moreover, I am going to keep some extra copies of this column on my desk to send to investors who write me long tales of woe.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Kingston's first police chief, Stephen D. Wood, died in his home on Clinton avenue, on June 4, 1908, aged 47 years. Older readers will recall Kingston's first police chief, who assumed his duties when the force was organized on May 15, 1891.

The late Thomas J. Murray was appointed the police sergeant and the five patrolmen appointed to serve were James D. McIntyre, Thomas E. Cullen, George Roach, John Kiernan and William Shuberg.

The bill creating the police force also specified that the constables who were serving at the time should act with the force. There were four constables who were serving that year and they also became members of the new police department. They were Michael J. Cahill, who was appointed junior police sergeant, and Thomas Johnston, John Sullivan and "Jack" Barry.

Shortly after the death of Chief Hood the police board appointed J. Allan Wood to fill the vacancy caused by Chief Hood's death, and Chief Wood served until his retirement a few years ago. Charles Phinney, who has been a member of the police department since 1908, is now chief, making the third man to fill the position of chief since the police force was organized in 1891.

For many years Kingston had but 13 voting districts, one in each ward, but with the women being granted the franchise during the years of the administration of Mayor Palmer Canfield it was found necessary to increase the number of election districts in order to handle the vote on election days.

I recall that on June 4, 1918, the Common Council unanimously adopted the report of its election committee designating 20 election districts in the city. This was done by dividing some of the more heavily populated wards into two voting districts and the districts designed in 1918 are those still in existence here.

Although the women were given the vote by act of Congress in 1918, in Kingston, at least, it has not changed the political setup to any extent as it has been found that as a rule the women of the house generally vote the same ticket as their husbands and sons.

At a special meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners on June 8, 1928, the board appointed Lieutenant Ernest Boss and Officer Joseph P. Fallon, president of the Kingston Patrolmen's Association, as members of the Kingston police department.

Labor Unions Have Lost Freedom of Self-Government for Duration of War, at Least

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Dec. 11 — The freedom of the American labor unions to govern themselves is gone—at least for the duration of the war. No longer does the Constitution of a labor union express the final word as to what may be done within a union. Hereafter the War Labor Board will decide what clauses of a labor union constitution shall continue in effect or be nullified.

Never, since the New Deal began its program of coercionism affecting the employer, have the labor unions been willing to believe the warnings that the same governmental coercionism could be applied against them and thus the beginnings of a state-controlled labor monopoly developed. But one of the latest pronouncements of the War Labor Board compels the labor union officers to suspend their constitutional provisions whenever the governmental agency charged with handling employer-employe relations in wartime says the word.

Up to now, incidentally, the right to strike has never been formally suspended by executive order. Labor unions have informally agreed not to exercise or assert their right to strike. Now under the precedent established by the War Labor Board, the right to strike can be suspended from labor union constitutions, and anything else relating thereto with respect to membership can be controlled by the government.

The official language of the War Labor Board's resolution which asserts this new power says in part:

"Therefore the National War Labor Board resolves in all cases in which it has granted or in the future may grant the maintenance of membership provision, it has been and is the board's intention that any employe may withdraw from his union without losing his job, at any time prior to the effective date of the maintenance of membership clause as provided for in the board's directive order in the individual case, irrespective of the rules, regulations, laws or constitutional provisions of the union involved which would otherwise make such withdrawal ineffective."

This is remarkable language—"irrespective of the rules, regulations, laws or constitutional provisions of the union"—and if it can be invoked to cure defects in union practices as they relate to so important a matter as membership withdrawal, it can be applied to correct abuses that have grown up in connection with initiation fees and discriminations concerning race or color and other restrictive practices governing admissions to unions.

When the state steps in to decide who shall or shall not be a member of the labor union or the conditions under which a member may withdraw from a labor union, the freedom of the labor organization to govern itself is virtually diminished.

The War Labor Board, of course is in a difficult spot. It finds itself in hot water because it made the original mistake of believing that it could not assure labor peace unless it granted, as a sop to the unions, a clause making the employer agree to dismiss any union members who failed to pay dues or failed to remain in good standing. It is open to question whether the patriotic union leaders of America would have insisted on a maintenance of membership clause as the price of their assent to a no-strike agreement in wartime. Naturally, the labor leaders endeavor, in every case they can obtain such a concession, to win a maintenance of membership clause, because it assures a steady flow of dues into the union treasury. This, as a rule, means the maintenance of the existing officers in their positions, too.

The controversy which gave rise to the new resolution of the board began when it was pointed out to members of the War Labor Board that, if they compelled employers to dismiss union members who failed to pay dues, it would operate as a straitjacket against the workers, because if they failed to pay dues they would be blacklisted against jobs in the same industry or they would not be permitted honorable withdrawal. To meet this criticism, the board ruled that members could have fifteen days within which to decide whether they wanted to remain as members, but many union constitutions provide that members cannot withdraw or else they fail to provide a machinery for withdrawal.

The War Labor Board thought that the simple expedient of discontinuing to pay dues would be sufficient. When it was discovered that many workers, under certain constitutions, couldn't withdraw by that method, the board decided the simple thing to do was to change the constitutions of the unions. Thus coercionism lead from one dilemma to the other.

It is widely reported that although the unions have made no public protest—since they are the beneficiaries of the maintenance of membership clause—their leaders are uneasy over the perplexing situation they find themselves in as the state begins to interpret or suspend their constitutions.

"Biography of a Business," by Marquis James.

Instead of writing the biography of an insurance magnate, Marquis James has revised the process and written the biography of an insurance company. Anybody could be forgiven for expecting the result to be about as interesting as the prose in small type of an insurance policy.

Should the average American read Mr. James' "Biography of a Business," however, the chances are good that he will change his attitude. There is some unexciting material in the book, of course. But there is a generous amount of drama, a remarkably accurate mirror of the social structure of America through the last 150 years, a history of its business development, and a study of the progress of insurance in this country. This is, come to think of it, quite a lot for one book, even one of 431 big pages.

The Insurance Company of North America began life in 1792 as a lottery, or more properly a "tontine." Originally the tontine was a device whereby a large number of subscribers bet each on his individual longevity. The man who died first got least; the man who died last got most. Samuel Blodgett, Jr., had tried one in Boston with small success. Presently he was helping organize another in Philadelphia with Ebenezer Hazard.

But the tontine did not do very well, and in the fall of 1792, a meeting was held in the State House in Philadelphia to determine its future. The meeting broke up after the appointment of a committee to investigate the possibility of an insurance company, and on November 12 of the same year the subscribers returned to the same place to hear the result. That was the beginning of the Insurance Company of North America. The end is not yet.

Through wars, pestilence, major fires, financial panics and the ordinary vicissitudes of ordinary life the company and the idea of insurance has progressed. Mr. James is a biographer of skill and taste. He has used both, plus a really startling amount of research to produce his book.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington — Of all the recent shake-ups in our wartime government, it seems to me that by far the most important is the appointment of Paul V. McNutt as virtual dictator of manpower.

No one could read the 13 points of President Roosevelt's directive reorganizing the War Manpower Commission, with McNutt as chairman, without realizing that it could well be that McNutt controls the destinies of more of us than any other single man in the United States.

First, it should be understood that McNutt has no power to draft labor. That will take additional legislation. But through his controls of hiring (through the now vitally important U. S. Employment agency) and of Selective Service, his power might well amount to just that.

However, it doesn't require speculation to see just how important to every one of us McNutt is to be.

Using only figures that McNutt himself has given out recently, the scope of his job becomes clear.

Before the end of next year, about one half of the total population of the United States, and I do mean between 60 and 70 million persons, will be applying ourselves in one way or another to the war effort, or will be dependent on those who are. And that has nothing to do with volunteer workers who are giving extra-curricular hours to civilian defense tasks.

A year ago, there were approximately 7,000,000 persons directly or indirectly employed in war work. Today, there are close to 18,000,000. In a year from now there will be at least 2,000,000 more.

Because the armed forces will siphon off around four or five million (and accidents, deaths, etc., will take more) about five million new workers have to be found in the next 12 months. About 2,000,000 of these will be women, to bring the amazing total of women in war industries to somewhere around 6,000,000. About a million more farm workers will have to be found (although not necessarily on a 12-month basis).

Skilled workers will have to be trained. Old persons and children will have to be worked into the picture on such part-time schedules as they are able to stand. Hundreds of now complicated tasks calling for highly skilled workers will have to be broken up into simple operations that can be learned in a short time.

Labor hoarders and labor pirates will have to be ferreted out and their practices stopped. The few remaining prejudices against women workers and the sectional prejudices against Negro workers will have to be broken down.

Since all war workers from now on will be hired by the U. S. Employment Services, its offices will have to be strengthened and manned by capable persons fully informed of all the problems in hand.

Selective Service will have to be revamped considerably with far more power in issuing directives in the hands of the national organization and far less in the heretofore practically autonomous local boards.

Hi-Y Boys Leave for Albany

Senator A. H. Wicks, left, and Clarence W. Roland, president of the board of directors of the "Y," right, bid goodbye and best of luck to the Kingston Hi-Y representatives who left for Albany at 12:20 today. Roger Vogt and Tom Galey will present their bill, which they passed through the district Assembly at Goshen, November 11, asking for a change in the voting age from 21 to 18. This is the seventh annual assembly conducted by the youth of the state in the houses at Albany. During the past years, a number of bills presented by the boys at their Assembly later became laws of the state.

Price Rise Might Bring Better Beef Stocks in Stores

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Office of Price Administration said today that a more even distribution of beef to retail stores is in prospect as the result of its order allowing "a moderate rise" in wholesale ceilings.

The O.P.A. order issued last night is effective December 16 for civilian purchase of beef carcasses and wholesale cuts. Retail meat price ceilings are not affected and live cattle prices, highest since August 1919 and now at 136 of parity, remain without price control.

Dollars-and-cents ceilings are established by the order for meat packers in 10 zones. Presently, each packer's ceiling is his highest March price but the order generally arranges the new prices in an ascending scale according to the zone's distance from the basing point, Kansas City, Mo.

The order is expected to assure a fairer distribution of supplies among retail stores, OP.A. said, and will give a "moderate rise" in certain instances over present wholesale maximums. The price of good grade beef in Kansas City, for example, may rise about one and a half cents a pound.

Prices of packers or wholesalers with abnormally high ceilings will be returned to the arbitrary maximum, said O.P.A., and packers with low ceilings thus will be permitted to compete for live animals without financial strain which has threatened to drive some from business.

O.P.A. added that the retail price ceiling may be revised later should it be found necessary to prevent a profit squeeze on butcher shops. Such an order would specify a fixed margin over cost for retailers.

Norris Would Have Hand In Making Lasting Peace

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Senator Norris (Ind.-Neb) wants to have a hand in making the just and permanent peace he thinks ought to come out of this war.

That is the sole ambition he retains as he nears the close of his long public career which will end January 2 when he leaves congress as a defeated candidate for reelection, the 81-year-old Nebraskan told reporters today.

"I hope I can be around and have a hand in making the peace," Norris said. "God knows that will be one of the most critical turning points in the world's history."

While Norris did not say so, there were indications that if President Roosevelt has anything to do with it, Norris will have something to say about the peace terms. These problems were reported to have been the chief topic of discussion when the two lunched together yesterday.

The President, who said it wasn't possible for him to attend dinners these days, sent a letter to be read at a testimonial banquet given for Norris last night by Senator Guffey (D.-Pa.) and attended by most of Washington's high officialdom.

Norris, attired in the black suit, white shirt and string tie he customarily wears in the senate, declared the United States was poorly prepared to help write the peace because it had not suffered the agonies of war which had been visited on Great Britain, Russia and China.

Turning toward Lord Halifax, the British ambassador who sat nearby, Norris said that the United States would have to travel a swift pace to keep up with the social progress which has been born in Great Britain when the millionaire and the pauper found themselves in the same bed underground, dodging the German bombs.

Real Estate Head Sees 'Tidal Wave' Of Regimentation

The American people are faced with a "tidal wave" of government regimentation and bureaucratic control that threatens to bury private enterprise and personal liberty, warned A. N. Groves of Syracuse, newly elected president of the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards in his inaugural address at the DeWitt Clinton Hotel in Albany today.

Stating that it is "unpatriotic to accept ill-advised and unwarranted government regulations blindly and meekly," Mr. Groves called upon members to exercise their democratic right to criticise and fight unnecessary regulation of private business and unnecessary expansion of bureaucratic control.

To cope with these problems, the state realty group has set up a War Emergency Committee, Mr. Groves announced. This committee, he said, will do both militant and informative work, and provide a clearing house for thought on emergency issues, serving as a medium through which the "vast real estate interests of New York state may have a more effective voice and influence, both in the state and in the nation. Each real estate board in the state, he said, is cooperating in the drive to enlist support for the War Emergency Committee.

Other officers of the state association installed with Mr. Groves were: Vice Presidents Henry G. Waltemade, Bronx, and William J. Gilliland, Long Island: Treasurer, Horace Carpenter, Jr., Buffalo; Secretary, Kenneth H. Clapp, Westchester, and Executive Vice President, Ray Hofford, Albany.

Ralph W. Arend of Utica was installed as chairman of the New York State Society of Real Estate Appraisers, a professional division of the association, with John D. Tighe of Rochester and E. J. Crawford, New York, vice chairmen.

Mr. Groves announced the appointment of five regional vice presidents of the association also. They are: Mr. Tighe of Rochester, western New York district, Allen S. Baker, Rome, central New York: Tom Rogers of Glens Falls, Capital district; Clarence W. Olcott, Scarsdale, lower Hudson district, and Walter S. Dayton of Bayside, metropolitan New York district.

In his address, Mr. Groves went on to point out that "we are living in a period of administrative law. Administrators of scores of alphabetical bureaus have power to issue orders that have all the effect of law, but do not require legislative approval.

"I do not maintain that some restrictions and regulations are not needed during war time," he added, "but I do maintain that many of them are unnecessary and not only fail to contribute to the war effort, but actually deter it by undermining basic civilian economy and drawing manpower from productive work into swollen government bureaus."

As an example of "unwarranted regulation," Mr. Groves cited the recent O. P. A. ruling which requires a one-third cash down payment in the sale of tenant-occupied houses.

"Certain other aspects of rent control, "he said, "give us further examples of unwarranted regulation. The voluminous reports, the army of employes with which O. P. A. has gone into rent control lead one to wonder just how temporary this regulation may be.

"I have no criticism of local rent directors and their offices," he was careful to emphasize. "They are trying to do their jobs in accordance with the O. P. A. orders. Unfortunately, they do not have sufficient discretionary power to handle individual cases on their merits. Washington dictates all the rules and insists on technical compliance.

"It has frequently been stated," said Mr. Long, "that internal criticism is not sufficient to bring about good administration. What is most needed is criticism from without—from laymen, organizations, businessmen, professions, and labor."

Adirondack Mail Lass Could Give Advice to Santa

Old Forge, N. Y., Dec. 11 (AP)—If Santa Claus needs some practical advice on travel in the heart of the Adirondack mountains this season, Ann Gibbs—18, pretty, blond and popular—is the girl who can give it to him.

Without his advantage of a sleigh and reindeer, she drives 108 miles a day through one of the east's heaviest snow belts delivering mail over a route her father left for war work.

The jolly old gent with the whiskers and pack is about the only one who could really sympathize with Ann's daily schedule, and she regards her task much the same way he does his annual excursion. When blizzards close roads and the snow piles higher than the running boards of her truck, she tells the postmaster:

"I promised to do this job, and I'm going to do it. I like to get letters and nice parcels and I know other people do too, so as long as I'm holding down this job I'll see that they get them."

She does, too. She carries a pair of skis and frequently uses them to reach an isolated camp, lugging a mail sack on her back, when the truck cannot get through.

Ann weighs 120 pounds. Occasionally some of the sacks on her truck are as heavy. Her loads range as high as 30 sacks, but she makes two round-trips daily between Old Forge and Raquette Lake, 54 miles each trip.

Ann applied—begged, in fact—for the job last June after she was graduated from high school. Her father, who was the regular carrier, had gone to work at the Rome air depot and her brother was in the army.

Coming in from a runover roads that give even snow plows plenty of trouble, she says:

I like my job better than anything I've ever done, and I'm not certain I'll let dad have it back when he comes home."

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

Double Catch

Towanda, Pa.—Donald Alger fished half a day and didn't get a bite—but he caught a fish.

Wading through a stream, he stumbled over an old rubber tire. He took it home.

Hours later, trapped inside, he found a five-pound bass.

Almost a Tragedy

Bridgeport, Conn.—Firemen exploring the ruins of a burned building, from which they thought everyone had been evacuated, were startled when they discovered a human skeleton.

Then they realized they were in the secret meeting room of a lodge. The skeleton had seen service in many an initiation ritual.

Burned

Los Angeles—The fire laddies may be short of reading matter this month.

Fire destroyed the print shop where the monthly fire department magazine is printed.

Tough Marines

San Diego—Barbers, complaining about the growing toughness of whiskers in this city, home of the big Marine Corps training base, upped the price of a shave from 35 to 50 cents.

"It takes about as long to give a man a shave as it does to cut a head of hair," explained a barber.

Universal Suffrage? Heck!!

Hiawatha, Kas.—You never saw young people take such an interest in an election!

The question: Shall the Christmas vacation be shortened from two weeks to two days?

The school board thinks it should be done, to shorten the school year so youngsters may be released for farm work early this spring. But they wanted to be fair about it, so they decided on the election plan.

P.S. Ballots go only to the high school kids' parents.

P.P.S. Most of them are farmers.

Colorful Quintet

Cuba, Ill.—The high school basketball team here really has color this year. Regulars on the team include Gray, Brown, Black and White. Another player, a redhead, answers to the name of "Red."

No Time on Helen Hayes' Hands

By DOROTHY ROE
(AP) Features Writer

"I'm becoming chronically ulterior."

That's what the war has done to Helen Hayes, who finds herself so busy with volunteer war work on all fronts that rehearsals for her new play might have to wait at times while she rounds up milk for Russian babies, helpers for the Stage Door Canteen and entertainment for the U.S.O.

"Whenever you catch me being charming these days," confides the energetic Miss Hayes, "you should become immediately suspicious. It's a dead sure bet I'm getting ready to nick you for a contribution."

At present America's favorite actress has no time on her hands, thank you, as vice-president of the American Theatre Wing, chairman of Russian War Relief in Rockland County, N. Y., moving spirit of the U. S. O. in Nyack and chairman of the Russian War Relief Milk Bank Campaign.

In the latter capacity the cheerful Miss Hayes has, without blinking an eye, adopted 13,000,000 (count 'em—13 million) Russian boys and girls who have been evacuated from the vast areas overrun by the Nazis. She expects to raise $50,000 by Christmas to supply milk for them.

In addition to her vast Russian family, Miss Hayes has three children herself—her 12-year-old daughter, Mary McArthur, an adopted son of four and an English war orphan.

HELEN HAYES
America's busiest actress

"I do hope," says America's first lady of the stage, with a worried frown, "that I won't make a war relief speech in the middle of the second act."

Wolves, Real Ones, Threaten Wartime Food in Alaska

Reindeer Herds Are Feeling Depletion of Raids; 1941 Drop Said to Be 31,000

Nome, Alaska, Dec. 11 (AP)—Down out of the mountains, wolves are threatening the war-time food supply of the Alaskan Arctic.

In less than ten years, the wolves have reduced reindeer herds of Alaskan Eskimos from 550,000 animals to 170,000 and still are slashing at the 45 reindeer herds forming this region's one food supply which still would be available in case of isolation or invasion of the territory.

J. Sidney Rood, director of the United States Reindeer Service at Nome, told me in an interview recently, "wolves are solely responsible for the depletion of the reindeer. This they have accomplished by two methods—direct, bloody attacks on the herds and constant pursuit of the animals so that they are driven away from their food supply and starve."

Rood said both timber wolves and lobos have attacked the herds, advancing into the comparatively flat Arctic coast country from the mountains of the Alaska range and even across the border of Canada's Yukon territory.

These reindeer herds are both government-owned and privately owned by Alaska natives, mostly Eskimos. No deer have been owned by white residents of the territory for a number of years. Eskimos are employed as herders, and, paid a nominal sum in cash, they take the remainder of their pay in deer, which then are herded along with the government stock. This herding, with other administrative expenses, cost the government $91,000 last year—when, incidentally, the herds decreased by 31,000 animals.

The threat to the reindeer became of paramount importance to this area with the declaration of war. Reindeer meat always has been a winter staple for such towns as Nome, Kotzebue, Teller, Wainwright and Point Barrow, all unreachable by ship during the winter months. With the influx of war workers, the demand was greatly increased.

Should the territory be cut off for any reason from continental United States, reindeer meat might be the only food supply for these civilians and for any army units in this part of Alaska. Just for normal needs, the army this year ordered more than 100,000 pounds of reindeer to supplement other meat supplies.

There is no immediate danger of a shortage of reindeer meat this winter, unless even local transportation should fail. Food estimates that the deer in the Teller-Deering area could be, and in fact should be, reduced by 25,000 animals for proper pasturage. This herd, however, is one of the best protected in the territory and has suffered only a fraction of the loss from wolves which other, more isolated herds have undergone. Such concentration of the deer has, in fact, been more or less forced by the wolf depredations, even at the expense of sufficient feed for them.

Some attempts to cut the wolf menace are underway at present, with debatable success. It is difficult to induce a native to go trapping with only the promiseof bounties—$20 a pelt—when he can obtain work at high wages in almost any Alaska town. Too, the work of ground wolf killers has in some instances to reduce the menace much even when it was done extensively. Rood himself believes the only answer is the employment of government airplanes flying at altitudes low enough to permit shooting of the wolves from the planes after the fashion of coyote hunters of the Montana-Idaho country.

One such plane, operating only in the pilot's spare time, accounted for 30 wolves last spring in a comparatively small area. Rood believes others, operating over the treeless, shelter-less flats where a wolf cannot hide even when asleep would more than pay for their operations. Without them, he is frank to admit that he has little hope of maintaining the herds at their present size and no hope of increasing them to what they were ten years ago.

STOUT-HEARTED NORWAY

Norway, which is as valiant in its downfall as any nation ever was in victory, is speaking noble words to Americans through Dr. Carl J. Hambro, former president of the Norwegian parliament. Addressing an audience of American business men, he tells of the role our own nation must play in this world crisis. He trusts his country's destiny with America.

"We who speak for the small nations," he says, "realize that the eight points of the Atlantic Charter cannot be based on fictitious ideas, as was the League of Nations. We know that the large powers with great populations must have greater authority than the small nations, and not an equal vote.

"Small nations will have to give up some of the old ideas of national sovereignty — ideas that hardly exist in the world today. We want any future world order to be based on fact, not fiction, and we of the small nations are ready to make the necessary sacrifices.

The great pre-occupation of the Norwegian people today is that there be no appeasement. The only thing they fear is a premature peace before the enemy is thoroughly defeated."

That tough little nation of 3,000,000 free men in bondage is "taking it" today as only those can do who have stout hearts and live without fear. There'll always be a Norway, and Norway shall be free. That is one of the things America is fighting for.

DISUNITY IN AFRICA

President Roosevelt, in the Army and Navy Journal, praises initiative and enterprise shown on American fighting fronts as "the outcome of thoughtful estimate made not by nightmarish amateurs, but by military men whose lives have been consecrated to a study of war."

"An outstanding example of their labors," he continues, "is the brilliant campaign under way in North Africa." He adds: "The dominant note of our common war effort is unity of our people and unity of the United Nations. That is the hard fact which is the spearhead of victory. Upon the battlefields of the seas and the continents across them, our crews and troops are cooperating with the efficiency of well trained and disciplined teams. Coral Sea, Midway, the Solomons, New Guinea and North Africa are shining instances of their power."

This is all reassuring except for one fact not mentioned, which mars the harmony and might become serious. It is the complex situation now existing in North Africa. That vast and vital area has been pacified, but its unity is strange and incomplete. A bold French leader of doubtful past and doubtful purpose, Admiral Darlan, has taken over the government of all French North Africa and seems to be consolidating it in his own name, for permanent rule. He does this with the blessing of General Eisenhower, American commander in Africa.

But the British forces in that area, who have borne the heat and burden of the day, and have probably done more than our own country to save Africa as a stepping stone to Europe—they refuse to recognize Darlan in any capacity, because they do not trust him. That little "rift within the lute" might yet make a lot of trouble.

WOMEN AND GRAVITY

What's the matter with women? This, perhaps the oldest conversational topic of the human race, has now received a partial answer. If it does not settled all the unsolved problems about femininity, it at least explains why they can do certain physical tasks better than others.

Their center of gravity is too low, says Prof. Granny Johnson of Denver University. By that he means that their weight is around the hips, whereas a man's is in his chest. A woman's heart is smaller than a man's. (No wisecrack intended). That is why she can never hope to run as fast as a man, or compete with him in other forms of athletics. In tests of endurance that do not require an extensive breathing apparatus, such as standing for a long time while nursing an invalid, women can take it much better than men. Perhaps long association with men has been calculated to give women endurance.

NIBBLING

"I am nibbling them." So General Joffre, first French commander-in-chief in the last war, explained his plan of wearing down the Germans by petty attacks here and there. Ultimately he hoped, on the Scottish principle that "many a mickle makes a muckle," that the little dents in the German lines would become big ones, and finally a breakthrough would become possible.

This strategy seems to be repeated in the Solomons. With naval forces inferior to the Japanese, we are wearing them down by submarine attacks, picking off a destroyer here and a cargo ship there. As the Japanese have less ability to replace lost ships than we do, every missing vessel is for them a calamity.

In all this, our own losses are apparently kept light. Even in the out-and-out battles we have lost less than our enemies. That is where Joffre failed. His theory was sound, but in practice he lost too many men in attempting insignificant dents. Admiral Nimitz appears to have profited from his example.

Perhaps the sharpest crack in the war is Churchill's remark that the German troops in Russia "have the consolation of knowing that they have been commanded and led not by the German general staff, but by Corporal Hitler himself."

Who would have thought the old-fashioned dump-heap could win the war?

Our new aristocracy: the holders of cards entitling them to extra gasoline.

The hitching post and watering trough may yet return.

Don't gripe about the cold weather—think of those Russian troops.

They're fighting on camels in Tunisia—but no puns, please!

Remember when we used to think the Japs were cute?

CALCIUM AND VITAMIN D

A British naval officer visiting America some years ago remarked that with all our automobiles, fur coats and good food, there were too many knock-kneed, bowlegged, pigeon-chested children to be seen and yet Newfoundland cod liver oil was as good as any available.

Should this officer visit us now he would find that these bowlegged, pigeon-chested, pot-bellied children are not a common sight any more; in fact practically none is found in children's hospitals.

This ailment is called rachitis or rickets and is due to an insufficient amount of lime in the body. This lack may be due to not enough being present in the foods eaten or in the amount of cod liver oil given, or that the body for some reason is not able to use the lime or calcium that is taken into the body.

Because there are not these deformed children about us, we are apt to think that all children are now getting enough calcium or vitamin D. Unfortunately there are still many children who are not receiving enough calcium or vitamin D because this is the only vitamin not found in large enough amounts in the average diet.

The outstanding symptom in these children whose diet is deficient in calcium is restlessness, tantrums, poor appetite, and sleeplessness. They are thin and much underweight and have poor muscular development. They are as bright as the average but because of their general weakness may not do well at school. They seem to be always tired despite their restlessness and desire to go places and do things. They are seldom happy.

From the above it can be seen that the first thought in treatment is foods containing calcium—milk, cereals, green vegetables and vitamin D in the form of cod liver oil or viosterol but as this may take some weeks to be effective, the daily habits of the child must be supervised.

The parents must insist on plenty of rest at night with some rest during the day, so much time for study and so much time for play, allowing no pleadings or coaxings to interfere with the day's program.

The reason that vitamin D is used in the treatment of these cases is that it has much to do with the use of calcium and phosphorus in the body. Every cell in the body must have calcium to enable it to live and do its work.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

Protection For Small Investors Babson Urges More Intelligent Use Of Proxies

New York City, Dec. 11—It certainly gets my goat to have letters from small investors complaining that everyone is against them and that they are being robbed and persecuted. No group of people have better protection than have the small investors. In addition to the Securities and Exchange Commission, there are Blue-Sky Laws for nearly every state and a host of other laws thrown in for good measure. Today I especially want to write of the importance of the proxy and the power which small investors have in connection therewith.

Proxies Contain Power

Most of the attempts to help small investors have been by legislation. One of the crying appeals is to have salaries of corporation officials reduced. To satisfy public clamour, this is now being done so that the presidents of the largest corporations will receive no more than the heads of certain labor unions! Yet, out of 130,000,000 people in the United States, only 3,000 are affected by such legislation and their total salaries amount to less than 1/100 of 1% of the total dividends. Most of the other legislation for which small investors are asking can have a very little affect upon dividends. More legislation is not the answer to the problems of the small investor.

While investors are complaining, they, themselves, hold the cure for their troubles. I refer to the proxies which are sent out once a year and which 95% of investors sign like blind monkeys. Hence, the question:—Should a small investor ever sign a proxy unless the dividends received and the company's general policy are satisfactory to him? Certainly, investors who blindly sign and return proxies have no standing in court.

Investors Are Very Lazy

I know of no company whose stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange where the directors and their friends own a majority of the stock. In most cases all the directors combined own only about 5% of the stock. The balance of the stock is usually distributed through thousands or perhaps a 100,000 small stockholders. I am not advising it, but I do say that if you and other small stockholders would only go on a "sit-down" strike and sign no proxies for awhile it would be impossible to hold the next Annual Meeting. Then the management would frantically write and ask you what is the reason for your not sending in to them your proxy. You would then have a chance to tell them. I promise you the result would be better dividends on your stock.

In other words, small investors, in order to get results, do not need to go to Washington or hire a lawyer, or do anything else but refuse to vote. Of course, if the president of the corporation writes and asks you what the trouble is and you are too lazy to answer the letter, then the fault will be squarely up to you. Unfortunately, I fear too many small investors are too lazy to write corporation officials and tell them what they want.

Family Companies Need a Shaking

Too much stock of most corporations is held by children, grandchildren and trustees who have no knowledge of the business. The stock has descended to these people who did nothing to deserve it. It almost seems as if too many companies are being operated from cemeteries rather than from efficient offices. Yet, on the votes of these "old friends" too many managements depend. These dry bones need to be shaken and this can best be done by the small stockholders. If investors would only appreciate the power of the proxy, their dividends received would increased and the value of their stocks would go up. This especially is true in the case of certain utility and insurance companies operated under management contracts.

All of this means that if you are satisfied that the companies in which you have your money invested are being honestly and efficiently operated and are paying a fair rate of dividend, then sign and return the proxies which are mailed to you. On the other hand, if you are disatisfied, do not depend upon the Government or anyone else to help you out. Refuse to sign any proxy but instead write the company that you want the directors to give you better results before you will permit them to be re-elected.

Independent Proxy Committee

One difficulty with Germany, Italy, and Japan is that they have only one political party. The hope of the United States and the other democracies lies with the two-party system. The German, if he goes to the polls, must vote for Hitler. There is no opposition party for whom he can vote. Those of us who are citizens of the United States can go to the polls and vote for the party in power or can vote for the opposition. This means that a nation is much safer and certainly the citizens are better off, when there is a strong opposition party.

The same principle applies to corporations. Most corporations are today operated on the Nazi system with one party and one ballot,—the ballot being printed so as to keep in power the present management. The future hope of the American investor is to develop the two-party system with two ballots offered for each Annual Meeting,—one endorsing the present management and the other appealing for a change in management. When such a voting system exists, you will see better earnings, larger dividends and higher stock prices.

Conclusion

Of course, I'll be severely criticized by many corporation officials for taking investors into my confidence this way. These managements are dependent on their salaries; many of them are getting so old that they cannot get a job elsewhere. Hence, they resent any interference by a "poor country boy" like me. Furthermore, I have hesitated a long time before speaking out in meeting in this way. At last, however, I am determined to do so. Moreover, I am going to keep some extra copies of this column on my desk to send to investors who write me long tales of woe.

Italian war prisoners in England, paid for their work in accordance with the Geneva convention, are putting that pay into English war bonds and stamps.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Kingston's first police chief, Stephen D. Wood, died in his home on Clinton avenue, on June 4, 1908, aged 47 years. Older readers will recall Kingston's first police chief, who assumed his duties when the force was organized on May 15, 1891.

The late Thomas J. Murray was appointed the police sergeant and the five patrolmen appointed to serve were James D. McIntyre, Thomas E. Cullen, George Roach, John Kiernan and William Shuberg.

The bill creating the police force also specified that the constables who were serving at the time should act with the force. There were four constables who were serving that year and they also became members of the new police department. They were Michael J. Cahill, who was appointed junior police sergeant, and Thomas Johnston, John Sullivan and "Jack" Barry.

Shortly after the death of Chief Hood the police board appointed J. Allan Wood to fill the vacancy caused by Chief Hood's death, and Chief Wood served until his retirement a few years ago. Charles Phinney, who has been a member of the police department since 1908, is now chief, making the third man to fill the position of chief since the police force was organized in 1891.

For many years Kingston had but 13 voting districts, one in each ward, but with the women being granted the franchise during the years of the administration of Mayor Palmer Canfield it was found necessary to increase the number of election districts in order to handle the vote on election days.

I recall that on June 4, 1918, the Common Council unanimously adopted the report of its election committee designating 20 election districts in the city. This was done by dividing some of the more heavily populated wards into two voting districts and the districts designed in 1918 are those still in existence here.

Although the women were given the vote by act of Congress in 1918, in Kingston, at least, it has not changed the political setup to any extent as it has been found that as a rule the women of the house generally vote the same ticket as their husbands and sons.

At a special meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners on June 8, 1928, the board appointed Lieutenant Ernest Boss and Officer Joseph P. Fallon, president of the Kingston Patrolmen's Association, as members of the Kingston police department.

Labor Unions Have Lost Freedom of Self-Government for Duration of War, at Least

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Dec. 11 — The freedom of the American labor unions to govern themselves is gone—at least for the duration of the war. No longer does the Constitution of a labor union express the final word as to what may be done within a union. Hereafter the War Labor Board will decide what clauses of a labor union constitution shall continue in effect or be nullified.

Never, since the New Deal began its program of coercionism affecting the employer, have the labor unions been willing to believe the warnings that the same governmental coercionism could be applied against them and thus the beginnings of a state-controlled labor monopoly developed. But one of the latest pronouncements of the War Labor Board compels the labor union officers to suspend their constitutional provisions whenever the governmental agency charged with handling employer-employe relations in wartime says the word.

Up to now, incidentally, the right to strike has never been formally suspended by executive order. Labor unions have informally agreed not to exercise or assert their right to strike. Now under the precedent established by the War Labor Board, the right to strike can be suspended from labor union constitutions, and anything else relating thereto with respect to membership can be controlled by the government.

The official language of the War Labor Board's resolution which asserts this new power says in part:

"Therefore the National War Labor Board resolves in all cases in which it has granted or in the future may grant the maintenance of membership provision, it has been and is the board's intention that any employe may withdraw from his union without losing his job, at any time prior to the effective date of the maintenance of membership clause as provided for in the board's directive order in the individual case, irrespective of the rules, regulations, laws or constitutional provisions of the union involved which would otherwise make such withdrawal ineffective."

This is remarkable language—"irrespective of the rules, regulations, laws or constitutional provisions of the union"—and if it can be invoked to cure defects in union practices as they relate to so important a matter as membership withdrawal, it can be applied to correct abuses that have grown up in connection with initiation fees and discriminations concerning race or color and other restrictive practices governing admissions to unions.

When the state steps in to decide who shall or shall not be a member of the labor union or the conditions under which a member may withdraw from a labor union, the freedom of the labor organization to govern itself is virtually diminished.

The War Labor Board, of course is in a difficult spot. It finds itself in hot water because it made the original mistake of believing that it could not assure labor peace unless it granted, as a sop to the unions, a clause making the employer agree to dismiss any union members who failed to pay dues or failed to remain in good standing. It is open to question whether the patriotic union leaders of America would have insisted on a maintenance of membership clause as the price of their assent to a no-strike agreement in wartime. Naturally, the labor leaders endeavor, in every case they can obtain such a concession, to win a maintenance of membership clause, because it assures a steady flow of dues into the union treasury. This, as a rule, means the maintenance of the existing officers in their positions, too.

The controversy which gave rise to the new resolution of the board began when it was pointed out to members of the War Labor Board that, if they compelled employers to dismiss union members who failed to pay dues, it would operate as a straitjacket against the workers, because if they failed to pay dues they would be blacklisted against jobs in the same industry or they would not be permitted honorable withdrawal. To meet this criticism, the board ruled that members could have fifteen days within which to decide whether they wanted to remain as members, but many union constitutions provide that members cannot withdraw or else they fail to provide a machinery for withdrawal.

The War Labor Board thought that the simple expedient of discontinuing to pay dues would be sufficient. When it was discovered that many workers, under certain constitutions, couldn't withdraw by that method, the board decided the simple thing to do was to change the constitutions of the unions. Thus coercionism lead from one dilemma to the other.

It is widely reported that although the unions have made no public protest—since they are the beneficiaries of the maintenance of membership clause—their leaders are uneasy over the perplexing situation they find themselves in as the state begins to interpret or suspend their constitutions.

"Biography of a Business," by Marquis James.

Instead of writing the biography of an insurance magnate, Marquis James has revised the process and written the biography of an insurance company. Anybody could be forgiven for expecting the result to be about as interesting as the prose in small type of an insurance policy.

Should the average American read Mr. James' "Biography of a Business," however, the chances are good that he will change his attitude. There is some unexciting material in the book, of course. But there is a generous amount of drama, a remarkably accurate mirror of the social structure of America through the last 150 years, a history of its business development, and a study of the progress of insurance in this country. This is, come to think of it, quite a lot for one book, even one of 431 big pages.

The Insurance Company of North America began life in 1792 as a lottery, or more properly a "tontine." Originally the tontine was a device whereby a large number of subscribers bet each on his individual longevity. The man who died first got least; the man who died last got most. Samuel Blodgett, Jr., had tried one in Boston with small success. Presently he was helping organize another in Philadelphia with Ebenezer Hazard.

But the tontine did not do very well, and in the fall of 1792, a meeting was held in the State House in Philadelphia to determine its future. The meeting broke up after the appointment of a committee to investigate the possibility of an insurance company, and on November 12 of the same year the subscribers returned to the same place to hear the result. That was the beginning of the Insurance Company of North America. The end is not yet.

Through wars, pestilence, major fires, financial panics and the ordinary vicissitudes of ordinary life the company and the idea of insurance has progressed. Mr. James is a biographer of skill and taste. He has used both, plus a really startling amount of research to produce his book.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington — Of all the recent shake-ups in our wartime government, it seems to me that by far the most important is the appointment of Paul V. McNutt as virtual dictator of manpower.

No one could read the 13 points of President Roosevelt's directive reorganizing the War Manpower Commission, with McNutt as chairman, without realizing that it could well be that McNutt controls the destinies of more of us than any other single man in the United States.

First, it should be understood that McNutt has no power to draft labor. That will take additional legislation. But through his controls of hiring (through the now vitally important U. S. Employment agency) and of Selective Service, his power might well amount to just that.

However, it doesn't require speculation to see just how important to every one of us McNutt is to be.

Using only figures that McNutt himself has given out recently, the scope of his job becomes clear.

Before the end of next year, about one half of the total population of the United States, and I do mean between 60 and 70 million persons, will be applying ourselves in one way or another to the war effort, or will be dependent on those who are. And that has nothing to do with volunteer workers who are giving extra-curricular hours to civilian defense tasks.

A year ago, there were approximately 7,000,000 persons directly or indirectly employed in war work. Today, there are close to 18,000,000. In a year from now there will be at least 2,000,000 more.

Because the armed forces will siphon off around four or five million (and accidents, deaths, etc. will take more) about five million new workers have to be found in the next 12 months. About 2,000,000 of these will be women, to bring the amazing total of women in war industries to somewhere around 6,000,000. About a million more farm workers will have to be found (although not necessarily on a 12-month basis).

Skilled workers will have to be trained. Old persons and children will have to be worked into the picture on such part-time schedules as they are able to stand. Hundreds of new complicated tasks calling for highly skilled workers will have to be broken up into simple operations that can be learned in a short time.

Labor hoarders and labor pirates will have to be ferreted out and their practices stopped. The few remaining prejudices against women workers and the sectional prejudices against Negro workers will have to be broken down.

Since all war workers from now on will be hired by the U. S. Employment Service, its offices will have to be strengthened and manned by capable persons fully informed of all the problems in hand.

Selective Service will have to be revamped considerably with far more power in issuing directives in the hands of the national organization and far less in the practically autonomous local boards.

OFFICE CAT

TRADE MARK REG.

By Junius

If you have any spare money now you don't have to worry about what to do with it. There is no law against hoarding War Stamps and Bonds.

Bashful suitor—If I stole a kiss, would you have me arrested for petty larceny?

Girl— (with spirit)—Good heavens, boy! Stealing a kiss isn't petty—it's GRAND!

Idle Gossip Sinks Ships!

A warning comes from men who know
That words may be a treacherous foe;
So, zip the zipper on your lips
For "Idle gossip sinks ships."
Careless chatter bodes no good
For any sort of soldierhood;
Neither does it aid or bless
Persons in civilian dress.
Safe sailing of our Ship of State
Demands that all reiterate:
"Zip the zipper on your lips
—I. J. B.

The Doctor was calling on a very sick patient:

Doctor—I feel I should tell you the truth. You are very ill and I doubt whether you will live very long. Is there any one you would like to see?

Patient (whispering)—Yes.

Doctor—Tell me and I will call him.

Patient (whispering)—Another doctor.

It's the friends you make that make you.

God's Sheep

"Mother, why do the fleecy clouds go by like wooly sheep, Sailing over to the north, then settle down to sleep?"
"My dear," the mother answered soft, hoping thus to fill her child with faith, "God's feeding them,
His white sheep on His Hill."
—Nellie Simmons

An office manager was telling how a girl came in to apply for a job, and when asked if she had any particular qualifications, stated that she had won several prizes in crossword puzzle and slogan writing contests.

Office Manager—Sounds good, but we want somebody who will be smart during office hours.

Applicant—Oh, this was during office hours.

It's dangerous to lose the habit of acquiring friends.

Barbara—I'd like to be a mermaid, wouldn't you, Junior?

Junior—No, because then I wouldn't have anything to hang up for Christmas.

A wise old editor in a small-town paper used to tell his reporters to write the news in plain, simple words, without putting on airs. Here is how he put the case himself:

"In this office we do not commence, we begin. We do not peruse a book, we read it. We do not purchase, we buy. We have no souvenirs, we have keepsakes. A spade is called a spade.

"In this town we do not reside in residences, we live in homes. We do not retire, we go to bed. We do not pass away, we die. We are buried in coffins, not caskets. We have no morticians. We are not all gentlemen, but we are all men. All women are not ladies, but all women are women. All women are females, it is true, but dogs, horses and pigs can also be females. Hence, in deference to our women, we do not class them as mere females.

"Our priests, ministers, and rabbis are not divines. Our lawyers are not barristers. Our real estate dealers are not realtors. Our plumbers are not sanitary engineers. No beauticians live here.

"All fires, remember, are not conflagrations. All testimony is not evidence. And if any reporter writes of a body landing with 'a dull, sickening thud,' he will land on the sidewalk with a jolt, his hat in one hand and his pay envelope in the other."

WORK-FIGHT PLAN URGED

Military training for all on reaching army age is advocated by Sir John Wardlaw-Milne of the British Parliment. He proposed that men with skilled training should be transferred to factories after a bit of army life, and then sent back into the army if they did not stick to their specialized tasks. This would end slackness and absenteeism for which young men and women are mainly responsible, he told constituents in a meeting at Kiddermaster, England.

Annual Shriners' Ball Will Not Be Held This Winter

There will be no annual Shriners' Ball this winter in Kingston.

The Kingston Shriners' Association announced today that the annual entertainment and ball for the benefit of the Industrial Home will not be held this winter owing to the gas and tire rationing program; the increased cost of entertainment, orchestras, and practically all items entering into the conduct of the ball as well as the 10 per cent federal amusement tax which must be paid out of the gross amount of ticket sale.

However, the Industrial Home is in urgent need of funds this year more than ever before and the Shriners feel that the general public as well as themselves will want to do their part in helping support this worthy charitable institution as they have done in years past.

The Shriners are, therefore, asking all those who have so generously supported this annual event by purchasing a patron ticket to send them the price of the patron ticket instead.

In this way the Shriners feel a larger amount can be turned over to the Industrial Home as the entire expense incurred in holding the annual ball will be entirely eliminated and the institution will receive the entire amount donted.

Lend ten per cent, or the enemy will take one hundred per cent.

Wickard May Be Center Of Army-Civilian Fight

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Talk of a possible new row between the army and the civilian administration was heard in Senate cloakrooms today—this time over Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's food control powers.

As reported by one senator, who asked to remain anonymous, the army is apprehensive over the broad new powers delegated to Wickard, pointing out that he could, if he so chose, make the army eat beans seven days a week.

There has been no suggestion that Wickard harbors any such intention, the army critics concede, but they would like to regain full control over the army's diet.

President Roosevelt, in giving Secretary Wickard sweeping control over producing and distributing food for domestic and overseas use, authorized and directed him to "purchase and procure food for such federal agencies and to such extent as he shall determine necessary or desirable, and promulgate policies to govern the purchase and procurement of food by all other federal agencies."

That, in effect, gives the secretary the power to fix the diet of the soldiers, sailors and marines, and what they are afraid of, the senatorial informant said, is that the department might try to provide them with an overabundance of food from a few surplus crops.

Wickard himself told a press conference yesterday that "our boys will be the best fed soldiers" in the world.

Madrid, Dec. 11 (AP)—Primo Carnera, former world heavyweight champion, is credited with saving a lady in distress. The boa began to crush the actress, the story said. Carnera, who was among the audience, came to her rescue.

Freeman Photo

Senator A. H. Wicks, left, and Clarence W. Roland, president of the board of directors of the "Y," right, bid goodbye and best of luck to the Kingston Hi-Y representatives who left for Albany at 12:20 today. Roger Vogt and Tom Gaiey will present their bill, which they passed through the district Assembly at Goshen, November 11, asking for a change in the voting age from 21 to 18. This is the seventh annual assembly conducted by the youth of the state in the houses at Albany. During the past years, a number of bills presented by the boys at their Assembly later became laws of the state.

Price Rise Might Bring Better Beef Stocks in Stores

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—The Office of Price Administration said today that a more even distribution of beef to retail stores is in prospect as the result of its order allowing "a moderate rise" in wholesale ceilings.

The O.P.A. order issued last night is effective December 16 for civilian purchase of beef carcasses and wholesale cuts. Retail meat price ceilings are not affected and live cattle prices, highest since August 1919 and now at 136 of parity, remain without price control.

Dollars-and-cents ceilings are established by the order for meat packers in 10 zones. Presently, each packer's ceiling is his highest March price but the order generally arranges the new prices in an ascending scale according to the zone's distance from the basing point, Kansas City, Mo.

The order is expected to assure a fairer distribution of supplies among retail stores, O.P.A. said, and will give a "moderate rise" in certain instances over present wholesale maximums. The price of good grade beef in Kansas City, for example, may rise about one and a half cents a pound.

Prices of packers or wholesalers with abnormally high ceilings will be returned to the arbitrary maximum, said O.P.A., and packers with low ceilings thus will be permitted to compete for live animals without financial strain which has threatened to drive some from business.

O.P.A. added that the retail price ceiling may be revised later should it be found necessary to prevent a profit squeeze on butcher shops. Such an order would specify a fixed margin over cost for retailers.

Norris Would Have Hand In Making Lasting Peace

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Senator Norris (Ind.-Neb) wants to have a hand in making the just and permanent peace he thinks ought to come out of this war.

That is the sole ambition he retains as he nears the close of his long public career which will end January 2 when he leaves congress as a defeated candidate for re-election, the 81-year-old Nebraskan told reporters today.

"I hope I can be around and have a hand in making the peace," Norris said. "God knows that will be one of the most critical turning points in the world's history."

While Norris did not say so, there were indications that if President Roosevelt has anything to do with it, Norris will have something to say about the peace terms. These problems were reported to have been the chief topic of discussion when the two lunched together yesterday.

The President, who said it wasn't possible for him to attend dinners these days, sent a letter to be read at a testimonial banquet given for Norris last night by Senator Guffey (D.-Pa.) and attended by most of Washington's high officialdom.

Norris, attired in the black suit, white shirt and string tie he customarily wears in the senate, declared the United States was poorly prepared to help write the peace because it had not suffered the agonies of war which had been visited on Great Britain, Russia and China.

Turning toward Lord Halifax, the British ambassador who sat nearby, Norris said that the United States would have to travel a swift pace to keep up with the social progress which has been born in Great Britain when the millionaire and the pauper found themselves in the same bed underground, dodging the German bombs.

Service Flag Will Be Raised Sunday

Dedication Services Will Be Held at City Hall at 2:30 P. M.

The service flag of the city of Kingston will be dedicated on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with appropriate ceremonies in front of the city hall. The purchase of the flag was recently authorized by the Common Council, acting on the suggestion of Mayor William F. Edelmuth.

At the time the flag was purchased, there were 1,532 men of Kingston in the armed service of the country, but since that time that number has been increased.

The program follows:

"Star Spangled Banner" by Victory Band.

Address by the Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool of First Reformed Church.

Address by the Rev. C. F. Kirton of the Franklin street A. M. E. Zion Church.

Address by Mayor William F. Edelmuth.

The invocation will be by the Rev. Stanislaus Malinowski of the Immaculate Conception Church, and the benediction by Rabbi Harold Englander of the Congregation Ahavath Israel. Col. Frank Meagher, principal of the M. J. Michael School, will preside as master of ceremonies.

W. C. T. U. Contributes Mobile Unit to American Red Cross

A mobile blood bank unit was recently presented to the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross by the New York State W.C.T.U. It was christened by Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, state president and was accepted by Colonel Earle Booth, director of the blood donor service of the American Red Cross.

The units go out from New York city daily to places within a distance of 100 miles to gather 150 pints of blood each and bring it back to the blood bank from which it is shipped to the processing plants. There it is separated and dehydrated.

The W.C.T.U. chapters in Ulster county shared in providing this unit. The local chapter at Ellenville contributed $128, alone. A Haemoglobin testing machine which will cost about $600 will be the next item to be furnished by the New York state organization. This machine is used to ascertain the extent to which donors may safely make repeated contributions of blood without injury to themselves.

Business Girls Will Pack Candy for Christmas Cheer

The Business Girls met at the Y. W. C. A. Wednesday evening, when Mayor William F. Edelmuth addressed the group on what the city of Kingston was doing for the war effort. He spoke of the different phases of the war work and of the people participating.

Plans were made for the Christmas party to follow the regular supper meeting next week. The members will also pack the candy for the community Christmas Cheer. Reservations for supper must be made at the "Y" office not later than Tuesday noon.

Details Completed For Moose Dance

At the last regular meeting of the committee in charge of the Christmas Cheer Dance to be held tomorrow evening at the Moose Hall sponsored by Kingston Lodge, No. 970, Loyal Order of Moose, final plans were completed for this second annual affair.

Although recent notification from the fire department has excluded all decorations, the committee has arranged other details for a successful affair. The entire proceeds derived from the occasion will be used to purchase toys for the community Christmas Cheer Committee.

Indications from the sale of tickets point to spreading much cheer on Christmas Day. Jesse Laurence and his orchestra will play for dancing.

The pageant promises to continue the tradition this church has set in this field. Entitled, "Dream Toward Bethlehem," it was written by Harriett Dorlevy and has a cast of 33. The theme revolves around the experience of several groups of people who are on the road to Bethlehem, including the Holy Family, all on their way to be listed.

Heavenly music is heard and then in procession come, led by the star, all the characters who have been seen by the roadside and to them the Angel of the Lord appears with the age-old words: "Behold, I bring you tidings of great joy."

The pageant is under the direction of the Rev. Russell Gaenzle. The music will be carried by a double quartet from the senior choir under the direction of Leonard Stine. At the organ will be Frederick Richens.

Packing Plants Sending Cvinya Tushunka Away

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP)—Take 13½ ounces of pork meat, 1½ ounces of lard, some salt, pepper, onion and one bay leaf—put them in a can and you have cvinya tushunka. And the Russian Army wants it.

In one of the large packing plants here processors began this week to prepare millions of pounds of cvinya tushunka, all destined for shipment to the Red Army. Future orders will depend upon the edibility of the product when it gets to the Russian front.

This is the newest innovation in the food revolution. It is even later than de-hydrated pork, which was last month's contribution to the food-for-victory program.

Cvinya tushunka is bulkier than de-hydrated pork, and will take up more shipping space. But officials at Armour and Company, which is filling the Russian order, said today it should be cheaper to make and tastier to eat.

Most unusual aspect of the Russian order, officials asserted, was the requirement regarding lard. Technicians in the industry said they had never heard of packing meat in lard, and they didn't know why the Red Army wanted it that way. Possibly the lard could be used as a spread, similar to butter, it was stated.

No — cvinya tushunka won't solve your meat problem. Even if you could pronounce it, you couldn't order it. Your butcher won't have it. It's strictly a Russian Army dish.

Tough Marines

San Diego—Barbers, complaining about the growing toughness of whiskers in this city, home of the big Marine Corps training base, upped the price of a shave from 35 to 50 cents.

Universal Suffrage? Heck!!

Hiawatha, Kas.—You never saw young people take such an interest in an election!

The question: Shall the Christmas vacation be shortened from two weeks to two days?

The school board thinks it should be done, to shorten the school year so youngsters may be released for farm work early this spring. But they wanted to be fair about it, so they decided on the election plan.

Surrogate Is Asked To Decide State Of Koehler's Mind

prior to her second marriage to Mr. Koehler. Still another element enters into the case. If Mr. Koehler did strangle her and cause her death, but was not in his right mind at the time, then being mentally unbalanced at the time of the act he could legally inherit her property and dispose of it to his son through the will which had been drawn up some time previous to the incident.

Elliott Cox, a friend, has petitioned the surrogate's court for letters of administration. That matter was returnable on November 16 and a hearing is scheduled for surrogate's court Monday.

The codicil to Mr. Koehler's will which was valid because it never was properly witnessed, left the property to his son. This codicil being illegally drawn, diverts the entire estate back to the previous wills which both Mr. and Mrs. Koehler had made.

Mrs. Koehler's son, Edward Behrendt of New Jersey, is represented in the matter by Frederick Stang. He contends that since Mr. Koehler killed his mother he deprived himself of any and all rights under her will and that therefore her property should become his under a will made prior to her marriage to Koehler.

Koehler's son contends that if his father killed Mrs. Koehler that he did so while out of his mind and that he therefore was not responsible for his act and therefore Mrs. Koehler's property under her last will became the property of Mr. Koehler and when he died the property became his since Mrs. Koehler, the beneficiary under Koehler's will, was already dead.

able belt of fertile land which extends roughly from the attractive seaport of Derna westward to Bengasi. There are further green jebels and wadis—hills and gorges—interspersed with desert clear to Tripoli.

The country surrounding El Agheila, where Field Marshal Rommel is preparing to make a stand against the Eighth Army, is pure desert.

Winter in the desert extends from November to April and there is much rain. In December and January the temperatures drop to freezing and it is particularly cold on top of the great escarpments which rise abruptly out of the desert floor. These tablelands figure largely in the fighting because they afford natural defenses.

Summer is the dry, hot season. Then temperatures soar to maybe 120 degrees or more Fahrenheit in theoretical shade, with soil temperatures much higher. I have seen the soil temperature on the Sinai peninsula east of the Suez Canal hit about 175—and that's hot.

Beginning the middle of March the hot, southeast wind known as the Khamsin blows periodically over a period of 50 days. This is one of the great trials of fighting men, for it is like a blast from a furnace.

The Khamsin frequently is so laden with sand that you can't see through it.

So terrible is this wind that if it blows more than five days each Bedouin is supposed to have the right to kill one of his wives.

The troops broadly speaking camp in tents and trucks. All equipment is reduced to the minimum because of the problem of transport and it should not be forgotten that this is a battle of transport.

The trek from Cairo to El Agheila is 1,500 miles or more. There is only one main road and that is the military highway skirting the Mediterranean.

This vital question of transport is linked inseparably with the greatest hardship of a soldier, be he Allied or Axis, and that is the scarcity of water in a land where men must sweat and acquire mighty thirsts.

I reported last Tuesday that Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander in chief of the Eighth Army, referred in an interview with me to the hardships of the desert and cited as an example that a man might go six months without a bath because of the shortage of water.

Camp sites generally are based on some waterpoint. These are frequent but many of them dry up in the summer. Where there is good water, it generally is not abundant and is brackish, spoiling the flavor of tea or coffee or the food in which it is used.

Each unit has its huge water tanks which travel with the advance. Indeed, every vehicle carries water and he is an unhappy soldier who has an empty canteen on his hip.

In the present drive, the British have chaser the enemy so fast that some of the Allied troops have had to make their water-bottles do two or three days for all purposes. That means about a quart of water. I know, because I've been having that experience myself. You would be surprised how far you can make half a teacup of water go if you must.

Libyan Fly Is Something

Another tribulation which would have made even Job lament is the Libyan fly. He looks like an ordinary Yankee housefly but he has a mean nature that is far removed from even the hoodlums among our house flies.

These creatures breed by the millions and hover in dense clouds about the camps. They are aggressive and attack you in armies. You can't get away from them. Once they hit you, they stick like molasses and bite the hand that feeds them. They swarm over refuse heaps and then wipe their dirty feet on your food and wash themselves in your coffee.

I am reminded of a remark made the other day by my colleague, George Lait, a war correspondent of the International News Service. George, Don Whitehead of the Associated Press and I occupied a small room in a deserted house near Bengasi. I was shaving and washing with my half a teacup of water out of my canteen while the other two lolled luxuriously under their fly and mosquito nets.

The flies were terrible and the nets were swarming. George blew a cloud of cigarette smoke among the pests struggling to get at him through his net and then said contentedly: "Gee, fellers! Just think of the poor devils back home in New York. They ain't got no flies or nuthin'."

I am afraid that I have painted a rather black picture of the desert in this dissertation about the water shortage and flies. Actually, the desert has many real attractions. This time of year there is much delightful weather. The air has a bracing tang and for days on end there's a pleasant warmth in the mid-day sun.

On the whole the desert is healthful enough despite its hardships. The British and American troops appear to be extremely well. They are, of course, out in the open all day and they are early to bed when there is no fighting.

Camps must observe rigid blackout rules lest the enemy see a light and drop bombs.

It is dark before 6 p. m. these days and this means that the boys are in bed by 8 o'clock or so. There's nothing to do but sleep when you can't have lights that are good enough to read or work by.

Naturally, this program will change when the battle is resumed.

So, while the desert presents its problems for the Yankee soldiers, there really is no cause for anxiety back home on that score. It is probably more healthful in general than a lot of places which we choose to call civilized.

William S. Jack, company president, said today that every two weeks 11 couples are sent to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., where the concern maintains 11 apartments.

"This allows for four days of travel and 10 days at the seaside, where these employes may enjoy the sunshine and the sea air and recuperate," Jack said. "They come back ready to resume their 12-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week confining jobs with added enthusiasm and improved physical condition."

This high rate continues an upward trend which began eight years ago, the bureau said, and has been markedly accelerated since 1939, when the recorded rate was 17.3 per 1,000. Meanwhile the death rate has declined slightly. The bureau said the provisional death rate during the first 10 months of this year was 10.3 per 1,000 compared with 10.6 for the corresponding period last year.

W.P.B. Considers Cut In 1943 Newsprint

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—The War Production Board weighed today the advisability of accepting a proposed newsprint curtailment for 1943 based on each newspaper's 1941 consumption.

The reduction, offered as a guide in controlling print paper consumption, was recommended by the newspaper industry's advisory committee yesterday following notice by Canadian and American government officials to expect a sharp cut in newspaper production next year.

The proposed order which would apply any necessary cuts percentagewise to the 1941 base, suggested that "each individual newspaper (daily, seven-day or non-daily) may consume print paper in each quarter commencing January 1, 1943, in an amount based upon the total tonnage required to produce its net paid circulation of the corresponding quarter of the year 1941."

Steve, who inaugurated the order's $50,000,000 war bond drive by opening a bond "booth" beside his peanut stand, asked that this message be read at the rally: "I have never bothered anybody in my life and nobody has stood in my way of making a living. To the Ladies of the Service
Center
Kingston, New York

Dear Ladies:

Received your letter today, and I feel it my duty to write and thank you and your friends for your kindness shown to my son, Kenneth and his friends on their late visit to Kingston. I have not seen my son yet so I expect to hear a lot about you when he comes home. It is a great comfort to us parents to know that our boys are being cared for by complete strangers. I can assure you the same is being done to our American friends over here. Everything is being done to make them feel at home and I trust it will soon be over, so that they can return to their own homes, and to their dear ones they have left behind.

Well, I must thank you once again for your cheerful letter and such pleasing words. God bless you all.

We remain,
Yours sincerely,
(Signed)
MR. AND MRS. BOYLETT

By DOROTHY ROE
(AP) Features Writer

"I'm becoming chronically ulterior."

That's what the war has done to Helen Hayes, who finds herself so busy with volunteer war work on all fronts that rehearsals for her new play might have to wait at times while she rounds up milk for Russian babies, helpers for the Stage Door Canteen and entertainment for the U.S.O.

"Whenever you catch me being charming these days," confides the energetic Miss Hayes, "you should become immediately suspicious. It's a dead sure bet I'm getting ready to nick you for a contribution."

HELEN HAYES
America's busiest actress

At present America's favorite actress has no time on her hands, thank you, as vice-president of the American Theatre Wing, chairman of Russian War Relief in Rockland County, N. Y., moving spirit of the U. S. O. in Nyack and chairman of the Russian War Relief Milk Bank Campaign.

In the latter capacity the cheerful Miss Hayes has, without blinking an eye, adopted 13,000,000 (count 'em—13 million) Russian boys and girls who have been evacuated from the vast areas overrun by the Nazis. She expects to raise $50,000 by Christmas to supply milk for them.

In addition to her vast Russian family, Miss Hayes has three children herself—her 12-year-old daughter, Mary McArthur, an adopted son of four and an English war orphan.

"I do hope," says America's first lady of the stage, with a worried frown, "that I won't make a war relief speech in the middle of the second act."

Wolves, Real Ones, Threaten Wartime Food in Alaska

Reindeer Herds Are Feeling Depletion of Raids; 1941 Drop Said to Be 31,000

Nome, Alaska, Dec. 11 (AP)—Down out of the mountains, wolves are threatening the war-time food supply of the Alaskan Arctic.

In less than ten years, the wolves have reduced reindeer herds of Alaskan Eskimos from 550,000 animals to 170,000 and still are slashing at the 45 reindeer herds forming this region's one food supply which still would be available in case of isolation or invasion of the territory.

J. Sidney Rood, director of the United States Reindeer Service at Nome, told me in an interview recently, "wolves are solely responsible for the depletion of the reindeer. This they have accomplished by two methods—direct, bloody attacks on the herds and constant pursuit of the animals so that they are driven away from their food supply and starve."

Rood said both timber wolves and lobos have attacked the herds, advancing into the comparatively flat Arctic coast country from the mountains of the Alaska range and even across the border of Canada's Yukon territory.

These reindeer herds are both government-owned and privately owned by Alaska natives, mostly Eskimos. No deer have been owned by white residents of the territory for a number of years. Eskimos are employed as herders, and, paid a nominal sum in cash, they take the remainder of their pay in deer, which then are herded along with the government stock. This herding, with other administrative expenses, cost the government $91,000 last year—when, incidentally, the herds decreased by 31,000 animals.

The threat to the reindeer became of paramount importance to this area with the declaration of war. Reindeer meat always has been a winter staple for such towns as Nome, Kotzebue, Teller, Wainwright and Point Barrow, all unreachable by ship during the winter months. With the influx of war workers, the demand was greatly increased.

Should the territory be cut off for any reason from continental United States, reindeer meat might be the only food supply for these civilians and for any army units in this part of Alaska. Just for normal needs, the army this year ordered more than 100.000 pounds of reindeer to supplement other meat supplies.

There is no immediate danger of a shortage of reindeer meat this winter, unless even local transportation should fail. Food estimates that the deer in the Teller-Deering area could be, and in fact should be, reduced by 25,000 animals for proper pasturage. This herd, however, is one of the best protected in the territory and has suffered only a fraction of the loss from wolves which other, more isolated herds have undergone. Such concentration of the deer has, in fact, been more or less forced by the wolf depredations, even at the expense of sufficient feed for them.

Some attempts to cut the wolf menace are underway at present, with debatable success. It is difficult to induce a native to go trapping with only the promise of bounties—$20 a pelt—when he can obtain work at high wages in almost any Alaska town. Too, the work of ground wolf killers has in some instances to reduce the menace much even when it was done extensively. Rood himself believes the only answer is the employment of government airplanes flying at altitudes low enough to permit shooting of the wolves from the planes after the fashion of coyote hunters of the Montana-Idaho country.

One such plane, operating only in the pilot's spare time, accounted for 30 wolves last spring in a comparatively small area. Rood believes others, operating over the treeless, shelter-less flats where a wolf cannot hide even when asleep would more than pay for their operations. Without them, he is frank to admit that he has little hope of maintaining the herds at their present size and no hope of increasing them to what they were ten years ago.

SHOKAN

Shokan, Dec. 11—Grant Every and family have moved from the Back Brook section of Olive to the place on Route 28 formerly known as Joe's Inn.

Mrs. E. C. Burgher, who taught the Shokan school for several years, recently called here.

Ramon Nadal of Kingston called on Shokan relatives Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gikas and four children are remaining in Shokan this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Czygam are the new owners of the Frank Barringer farm which was known as the Stevens place.

Dec. 11, 1913: Work on the viaduct over the U. & D. R. R. tracts continues despite the frost. Ten-ton trucks are busy carrying bluestone blocks from the railroad station to the Ashokan Dam. Work on the aerator park above the waste channel is in full swing, and the great spillway job is fast nearing completion. Forty men, mostly local were laid off by the city last week. A number of men have gone away to work in ammunition plants.

The Rev. Daniel Y. Brink, who resided here as a boy, has accepted a call from Trinity Reformed Church of West New York, N. J. Dominie Brink, who resigned the pastorate of the First Reformed Church of New Brunswick, is a son of the Rev. Henry Brink.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Polk, who lived in the N. Windrum house on the state road for several weeks, have removed to New York. Mr. Polk, who was connected with the B.W.S. police force, plans to engage in aviation, his former occupation.

Miss Ann Ingalls, ill for many months, is improving.

Paul Governali Of Columbia Is Picked for Squad

Frankie Sinkwich Chosen for Second Straight Year; Mike Holovak, B. C., Is Selected

By HERB BARKER
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, Dec. 11—Reflecting the tremendous concentration of football strength in the Big Ten and Southeastern conferences, the 18th annual All-America team, chosen today by The Associated Press, allots six places to those two powerful leagues, awards two to the East, and one each to the Missouri Valley, Southern and Pacific Coast conferences.

On the All-America squad of 33 players, named after a nationwide survey of expert opinion, nearly two-thirds are drawn from the Middle West and the South. The actual break-down shows 11 from the South, 10 from the Mid-West, five from the Far West, four from the East and three from the Southwest.

This year's All-America offers three "repeaters" from the 1941 team in the persons of Frank Sinkwich, sensational backfield ace of the Georgia Bulldogs, Southeastern champion and Rose Bowl nominee; Dave Schreiner, crack Wisconsin end, and Dick Wildung, Minnesota's great tackle.

Rounding out the All-America backfield with Sinkwich are Glenn Dobbs, quarterback of Tulsa's Missouri Valley champions and Sugar Bowl nominees; Paul Governali, demon-passer of Columbia University and Mike Holovak, powerful Boston College back.

Named to the guard positions are Garrard Ramsey of William & Mary, Southern conference titleholder, and Chuck Taylor of Stanford's Indians. The center is Joe Domnanovich, captain of Alabama's Crimson Tide.

The line, anchored by the huge Johnson's 235 pounds, is one of the heaviest ever chosen for the All-America, averaging 204 pounds. The backfield hits a 190-pound average.

Tulsa, William & Mary, Kentucky and Columbia all are given representation for the first time since 1925 when The Associated Press first selected its All-America. Ohio State's last representative, in 1930, was Wes Fesler, also an end. The Buckeyes' 1942 representative, Shaw, is the only junior on the team. All the others are seniors.

May Be Last for War

This, the first war-time All-America in a quarter century, may well be the last for some time. Most of the hundreds of players who figured in the selections will be in the armed services long before another football season rolls around.

As a matter of fact, it is doubtful that another full-time collegiate season will be held until the war is over. Transportation and man-power problems may become insurmountable before the 1943 season.

But if the 1942 campaign was the last for the duration, the boys who play the game made it a good one. It was the daffiest, most unpredictable season in memory, partly because sophomores and freshmen were used freely to make up shortages in varsity manpower.

But out of the excitement, one fact definitely was established—that no section in the country could match the power of the Big Ten, with Ohio State, Wisconsin and Michigan, or the Southeast, with Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee and Alabama.

The caliber of play sloughed off considerably in most other sections, notably the Southwest, East and Far West.

Headliner All Season

Sinkwich, named to the All-America for the second successive year, was a headline performer all season and none could seriously challenge his right to a berth on any all-star squad.

Statistics are dry stuff but in Sinkwich's case they serve to illustrate his all-around effectiveness and his immense value to Georgia's fine team. Youngstown Frankie set up a new national record in total offense with 2,174 yards, picking up more than 1,300 yards by passing and averaging better than five yards a try on the ground. Developing as a kicker this season, he averaged better than 36 yards a try. In addition to captaining the team, Sinkwich called the signals and kicked off.

There was real drama in his performances in the sensational victory over Alabama and again in the shocking loss to Auburn. Georgia was trailing Alabama 10-0 after three quarters and then Frankie went into action. Helped unquestionably by the skill of such receivers as George Poschner and Lamar Davis, Sinkwich completed nine of 13 passes in the final quarter of that game, including two to Poschner for touchdowns that won the game.

In the Auburn game, when Georgia's string of nine successive victories was snapped, Sinkwich was individually a great performer but could not match Auburn's red-hot team. Georgia initiated 80 offensive plays against the Plainsmen and Sinkwich either ran, passed or kicked in 72 of them. Despite the fact that Georgia's line was badly outplayed, Sinkwich, playing 55 minutes, was credited with 177 yards passing and 31 rushing, scored Georgia's first touchdown and passed to Lamar Davis for the second. He was a standout in the Georgia Tech game which clinched the Rose Bowl assignment for Georgia.

The Ohio husky also was a spectacular defensive player. In this respect, he was at his best in the Auburn game when he repeatedly was credited with smashing through the interference to pull down the ball carrier. He was an alert and successful pass defender all season.

Coaches of the Southeastern conference, balloting for the annual all-conference team, unanimously picked him for the backfield. No other back in the conference was so honored.

Governali a Standout

It is doubtful if any player in the country accomplished more, with less support, than black-haired, durable Governali. His passing performances are down in cold figures: 87 completed in 165 attempts for 19 touchdowns and 1,442 yards. The touchdown total ties the modern record established by Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian in 1938; the yardage total is just 15 yards short of the record held jointly by O'Brien and Bud Schwenk of Washington University, St. Louis.

What is not so apparent is just what Governali meant to a Columbia team that was outmanned week after week. Columbia never has what other schools would consider adequate manpower. This year, the Lions had even less than usual. They won few games but they were in the ball game always — and solely — because of Governali. His passing record becomes all but incredible when it is taken in conjunction with the admitted weakness of the Columbia line. He never received the protection a record-breaking passer gets from his mates. Rushed constantly by far superior foes, Governali pegged away coolly and accurately and successfully even when the defense knew beyond a shadow of a doubt that a pass was coming.

Perhaps his greatest performance this season was against Colgate when he completed 17 of 25 including three for touchdowns. Colgate, at that time, was one of the East's good teams, certainly far better fortified all along the way than Columbia.

It should be remembered also that Governali did virtually all of Columbia's kicking, averaging just a shade under 40 yards in 56 boots, and was an effective runner although perforce the Lions had to use the airways most of the time. Add to all this the fact that Paul was a 60-minute performer, and the best defensive player on the team, and you begin to get the idea that here is a really fine football player.

Lou Little, who coaches Columbia teams with conspicuous success, is no drum-beater for either himself or his players. But after Columbia's final game, Little had this to say:

"Imagine what Governali would have been if he had had a team around him to give him the sort of help that Davey O'Brien had, when he was playing on a championship team. Governali had help, the utmost that our boys could give him. But we didn't have the manpower. Without Paul, we wouldn't have been in the ball game at any time. He passed, he ran, he kicked, he brought down from behind some of the fastest runners football has seen, and he took a battering week after week without ever a word of complaint and was always on deck for the next scrap."

Dobbs Paced Tulsa

Dobbs, who packs 190 pounds on his six-foot, four-inch frame, was the principal reason for Tulsa's unbroken string of ten victories. This was especially true in Tulsa's victories over such major rivals as Oklahoma and Baylor and, to a lesser degree, over Arkansas.

Tulsa so far outclassed the opposition in its own conference, the Missouri Valley, that Dobbs was used sparingly for the most part. The Golden Hurricane beat every team it faced by not less than 23 points and thus simply did not need to take full advantage of Dobbs' great football talents. The Hurricane ran up 427 points against the opposition's 32, taking Oklahoma, Baylor and Arkansas over the hurdles by a collective 87-7 score.

There can be no question of Dobbs' class. His merits were conceded by rival coaches and by every football expert who saw him play. A fine defensive player and an audacious field general, Dobbs was a genuine, grade-A triple-threat, a fine runner, passer and kicker.

As a runner, he averaged just a shade under 5½ yards per try; as a passer he compiled the amazing average of .626 with 67 completions in 107 attempts, good for 1,066 yards, and with only three interceptions; he was a superlative kicker with an average that soared past 48 yards for the season.

Defensively, Dobbs was a savage tackler and ball hawk. He usually played in the safety spot and nobody got past him all season.

Dobbs put on an All-America performance in the final game with Arkansas. After leading Tulsa 51 yards to a touchdown in the first period, Dobbs suffered a badly twisted knee and was removed from the game and turned over kicking and passing chores to N. A. Keithley. A few minutes later, however, he persuaded Coach Henry Frnka to put him back in the lineup and finished the game at wingback. From that position he caught two passes for a gain of 59 yards, tore through the Arkansas line for 17 yards despite a bad limp, and played a great game on defense.

Statistically, Dobbs' best performance this season was in the game with Washington University of St. Louis. He played only two quarters, but threw ten passes and completed all of them, three for touchdowns, and got loose on one 56-yard sprint for a touchdown.

Holovak Showed Power

For a time this season, Holovak carried the full burden of Boston College's offense on his powerful shoulders. Later on in the season, big Mike got some help but there never was any question about his position as the Eagles' greatest all-round back, defensively as well as offensively.

Up until the Holy Cross debacle when Boston College's eight game winning streak was smashed, Holovak averaged better than 100 yards a game with his plunges through opposing forward walls or his sweeps around the ends.

The Eagles' line was so badly outplayed by Holy Cross that Holovak had no real chance to get going in that game after the first period had been played. But otherwise, the big 205-pounder was a tough man to stop. Against North Carolina Pre-flight's crack array, Holovak broke through for 113 yards and was a big factor in carrying the Eagles to a 7-6 victory that represented the Pre-flighters' first defeat.

A regular for three years, Holovak was co-captain of the Eagles this season.

Schreiner and Shaw, the Western Conference's leading wingmen, capture the two end posts on the All-America on the basis of their consistently spectacular play, offensively and defensively, all season long.

Schreiner, picked for All-America honors for the second year in a row, was an important cog in the formidable Wisconsin machine which came so close to annexing the Big Ten championship and which had the satisfaction, at least, of being the only team to whip Ohio State, the conference champion. A fine pass catcher tackler, blocker and defensive stalwart, Schreiner was a real "iron man" this year, playing 60 minutes against Notre Dame, Ohio State, Iowa and Northwestern and 58 minutes against Minnesota and Great Lakes. In three years of varsity competition Schreiner never had time out called for him. Only twice was ground gained outside him during the past season, Notre Dame getting seven yards and Iowa six. Ne was exceptionally skillful at hand-playing the interference, frequently pawing his way through to the ball carrier or driving the interferers and ball-carrier out of bounds.

60-minute Performer

Shaw was another 60-minute performer for Ohio State which ran through a tough ten-game schedule with only one loss and finished off with a tremendous 41-12 conquest of Bernie Bierman's Iowa Pre-flighters.

The Buckeye wingman was at his best when the going was toughest, a standout in the Illinois, Michigan and Iowa Pre-flight games. He was equally at home on defense or offense, a fine pass-catcher, blocker and tackler and Ohio State's fastest man down the field on punts. Himself a good punter, he was not used for that duty because of his value downfield in covering Buckeye kicks. Coach Paul Brown said he'd rather get a short punt and have Shaw cover it, than to have a good punt from Shaw and then have the receiver get away.

Tackles of All-America caliber were relatively scarce this season but Johnson and Wildung would have been standouts in any company.

Johnson, a giant of a man, played sensationally for Kentucky's losing team. Moving his tremendous 235-pound bulk with surprising agility and speed, Johnson was an impressive figure in the Wildcat line, and what is more, an immovable one. He was the big reason why Georgia barely got past the Wildcats, 7-6, and he was equally effective against Alabama and the rest. Like Georgia, Alabama finally quit running plays at his side of the line because it cost them an average of three yards every time they did it. He was tremendously effective on defense, standing straight up to his full six feet, six inches, batting would-be blockers out of the way with wide-swinging swipes of his huge paws and then lunging in to tackle the ball carrier.

Minnesota's long Big Ten reign finally came to an end but no blame for that could rest on Wildung's shoulders. This repeater from the 1941 All-America was every bit as effective as he had been the previous season. He had no bad days as he played 60 minutes against Iowa Pre-Flight, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin, and 58 minutes against Northwestern and Iowa. He rates as one of the really fine tackles of recent years, a master of his position.

Guard Play Exceptional

Guard play was of exceptional high quality all over the country and Ramsey and Taylor are selected only after the most careful consideration of the qualifications of their leading rivals, notably Julius Franks of Michigan, Harvey Hardy of Georgia Tech and Jack Lescoulie of U.C.L.A.

Ramsey's play drew universal praise from every team which met William & Mary's Southern conference champions. This durable star called defensive formations all season, led the interference on all outside running plays, and handled the ball on end-arounds from the fullback. He dropped back to protect on passes and his keen guard play was largely responsible for William & Mary's fine defensive record against such rivals as Harvard Dartmouth, Navy and North Carolina Pre-Flight. He never was taken out for injuries in three years. Ramsey led the All-Southern conference voting this year with 119 vote out of a possible 126.

Stanford got away to a slow start this season but finished strongly and leading the Indians' late surge was the red-headed guard, Taylor. He played 50 minutes or more against Washington, Notre Dame, Washington State and Santa Clara and drew tribute from West Coast coaches as the best guard in the region. His most spectacular exploit came in the Southern California game when he stole the ball from Mickey McCardle and ran 32 yards for the only touchdown of his career.

Domnanovich stood out in a great array of centers including. Lou Sossamon of South Carolina, Spencer Moseley of Yale, Fred Naumetz of Boston College, Fred Negus of Wisconsin, Buddy Gatewood of Baylor and Walter Harrison of Washington.

Captain of the Alabama team, Domnanovich ran the team on defense. His canny selection of defensive set-ups held Alabama's opponents to about 60 yards a game on rushing plays. Playing 50 minutes in every major game, Domnanovich was a brilliant defensive line-backer and a terrific blocker on offense. Throughout the season he was in on three-fourths of Alabama's tackles, a truly great performer against the formidable opposition the Tide faced.

Rickey Sees Many Players Staying On Defense Jobs

By JUDSON BAILEY

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Doubt that baseball players who have taken defense jobs this winter will be back with their clubs next spring was expressed today by Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Discussing baseball's place in the war effort at a press conference, Rickey said, "I think the government wants to see the sport continued, but I think we must do it with the men the government doesn't want—men who would be idle otherwise.

"A very radical thing has been done in the last ten days. The government now can tell people where to work and where not to work.

"As for its concern with baseball personnel, I don't see it now as a problem of calls by the army, navy, etc. b,ut the problem of shifting men from non-essential to essential industry.

"I know a number of ball players have taken up various kinds of other work this winter. Some of their jobs may be of great importance to the war effort and others may not. But it is conceivable that many of those now working will be held in essential industry. We'll just have to get along with what we have."

Rickey disclosed that one of the Dodgers' brightest stars has just about crossed the threshhold of the army. Pete Reiser the flashy young centerfielder, took his physical examination last week and was reclassified 1-A. His draft board in Brooklyn said he probably would be inducted about January 1. He married last spring but previously had been classified 3-A for helping support his family.

How many others of last year's team may be called to the colors or may need to stay at their off-season tasks, no one could say. Rickey said he had heard nothing more from Dolph Camilli, the veteran first baseman who has declared he would give up baseball to stay on his ranch next year. However, Rickey said if Camilli had not changed his mind when spring training time arrived, he himself would go to California to try to persuade him to play ball.

The possibility that the Dodgers might not train in Florida also was uncovered. Rickey said the Dodgers would observe "not only the letter but the spirit" of the travel curtailment suggested by Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman. He said he had done some thinking about giving up the West Palm Beach training site selected recently, but did not know whether he could find any other satisfactory location.

The reappointment of Fred Fitzsimmons as a pitcher-coach and the establishment of a working agreement with New Orleans in the southern association also were announced.

FIVE BUCKS BRING ONE

Pierre, S. D. (AP)—Buying a $5 license was almost tantamount to getting an antelope during the special four-day season prescribed by the South Dakota Game Commission. Of 487 licenses to report on their hunt, 468 said they bagged game. The commission issued the licenses to cull old bucks from herds which an airplane census showed numbered more than 10,000 animals.

Motor vehicles no woperating in Switzerland number only 40,000, compared with 120,000 before the war.

PHONES FOR ALL WORLD

Telephones will reach every corner of the globe in the era of postwar development, it is reported in London. Experiments already made on land forecast cables beneath the Atlantic through which 12 conversations at once will be possible by the insertion of vacuum tube repeaters every 40 miles. The current for the repeaters will be carried in the cable, and they will function for 20 years without attention.

TRADE MARK REG.

By Junius

If you have any spare money now you don't have to worry about what to do with it. There is no law against hoarding War Stamps and Bonds.

Bashful suitor—If I stole a kiss, would you have me arrested for petty larceny?

Girl— (with spirit)—Good heavens, boy! Stealing a kiss isn't petty—it's GRAND!

Idle Gossip Sinks Ships!

A warning comes from men who know
That words may be a treacherous foe;
So, zip the zipper on your lips
For "Idle gossip sinks ships."
Careless chatter bodes no good
For any sort of soldierhood;
Neither does it aid or bless
Persons in civilian dress.
Safe sailing of our Ship of State
Demands that all reiterate:
"Zip the zipper on your lips

—I. J. B.

The Doctor was calling on a very sick patient:

Doctor—I feel I should tell you the truth. You are very ill and I doubt whether you will live very long. Is there any one you would like to see?

Patient (whispering)—Yes.

Doctor—Tell me and I will call him.

Patient (whispering)—Another doctor.

It's the friends you make that make you.

God's Sheep

"Mother, why do the fleecy clouds
  go by like wooly sheep, Sailing over to the north; then settle down to sleep?"
"My dear," the mother answered soft, hoping thus to fill her child with faith, "God's feeding them,

—Nellie Simmons

An office manager was telling how a girl came in to apply for a job, and when asked if she had any particular qualifications, stated that she had won several prizes in crossword puzzle and slogan writing contests.

Office Manager—Sounds good, but we want somebody who will be smart during office hours.

Applicant—Oh, this was during office hours.

It's dangerous to lose the habit of acquiring friends.

Barbara—I'd like to be a mermaid, wouldn't you, Junior?

A wise old editor in a small-town paper used to tell his reporters to write the news in plain, simple words, without putting on airs. Here is how he put the case himself:

"In this office we do not commence, we begin. We do not peruse a book, we read it. We do not purchase, we buy. We have no souvenirs, we have keepsakes. A spade is called a spade.

"In this town we do not reside in residences, we live in homes. We do not retire, we go to bed. We do not pass away, we die. We are buried in coffins, not caskets. We have no morticians. We are not all gentlemen, but we are all men. All women are not ladies, but all women are women. All women are females, it is true, but dogs, horses and pigs can also be females. Hence, in deference to our women, we do not class them as mere females.

"Our priests, ministers, and rabbis are not divines. Our lawyers are not barristers. Our real estate dealers are not realtors. Our plumbers are not sanitary engineers. No beauticians live here.

"All fires, remember, are not conflagrations. All testimony is not evidence. And if any reporter writes of a body landing with 'a dull, sickening thud,' he will land on the sidewalk with a jolt, his hat in one hand and his pay envelope in the other."

MACHINES AID FARMERS

New Zealand farms have almost as many cream separators as electric motors, a survey just reported in Wellington reveals. The Dominion's farms have 12,516 tractors, 54,966 separators and 61,826 electric motors, the report showed. In addition are 23,644 internal combustion motors, 30,878 milking machines, 10,916 shearing machine plants and967 wheat and threshing machines. The milking machine plants have a 104,708-cow capacity and the shearing machine plants provide 27,550 stands.

WORK-FIGHT PLAN URGED

Military training for all on reaching army age is advocated by Sir John Wardlaw-Milne of the British Parliment. He proposed that men with skilled training should be transferred to factories after a bit of army life, and then sent back into the army if they did not stick to their specialized tasks. This would end slackness and absenteeism for which young men and women are mainly responsible, he told constituents in a meeting at Kiddermaster, England.

Rope-Skipping Champ

Miami, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP)—H. E. Dunton, 55, holds the world's record for rope-skipping and he's keeping in shape to meet any challengers. Dunton set the record a few years ago at Birmingham by jumping over the rope 8,630 times in one hour, shattering the old record of 7,518 skips held by Pete Shuster of Martinsburg, W. Va. He keeps in shape by jumping rope 1,000 times each week day. Then he turns to speed bag-punching, using seven different movements for a total of 2,200 punches. After this he runs 70 laps on the Y. M. C. A. track, equalling two and one-half miles, finishes his workout by exercises, and then cools off by swimming several lengths of the pool.

Bertelli's Record

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 11 (AP)—Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame's pass-master, was just as effective this year although not as accurate as in his 1941 sophomore season. In 1941 he passed 123 times, completed 70, had 10 interceptions and made 1027 yards. This fall he tossed 162, completed 72, had 16 picked off and made 1039 yards. He lost 12 yards rushing, however, being tackled on pass attempts. His 1942 total gain is 1027 — matching his sophomore record exactly.

SCOTCH GIRLS WANT SALT

Local Soldiers At Camp Shelby Enjoy Army Life

To All Our Kingston Friends;

You can greatly favor us by having the following pertinent message printed in our daily newspaper, THE KINGSTON DAILY FREEMAN.

We are repeatedly being asked by you folks at home just how well we like being in the Army and especially our training period at CAMP SHELBY. Collectively and in unison, our answer is a loud and most definite, "WE SURE DO". The kind influence by way of welcome words and sincere fellowship extended us from the highest ranking officer to the ordinary private who has been here long before our entering SHELBY is of the warmest and sincerest nature. We are treated here with the greatest degree of human kindness plus the even going temperament of regimental routine. Nothing is really omitted both during the working schedule and after hours that would go a long way towards the making of our stay here most comfortable. We may add that the Company funds even provided athletic equipment for our intercompany sports activities such as basketball, baseball and boxing. These sports, we will all admit go a long way towards building our bodies, and our army morale is also kept on the highest plane due to just this kind of physical endeavor.

The greatest and most important keynote here at Camp SHELBY is "COOPERATION," and fully given over to the grim realization that we are entrusted with the greatest job at the moment to accomplish, we are sincerely inerested and are performing it in the greatest style which we know how, doing it wholeheartedly and without the slightest flinching.

Improvement as to our health and appetites is very self evident in all of us which only bespeaks the best kind of treatment accorded us by all officials at the CAMP here. The diets are well balanced and most nourishing, the best evidence on this score is our constant willingness and spirit to give our all in the way of training and even doing extra duties whenever asked. The old adage that an army travels on its stomach is well demonstrated here to the nth degree.

We would like to close the above message with a gentle reminder to all of you Wives, Sweethearts, Parents and Friends. It is simply this:

Please do not worry concerning our welfare here at the Camp. We get the Army's best and they do their darndest to keep us happy.

So, hoping to see all of you real soon on our first furlough, we remain,

Most sincerely yours,
PVT. EDWIN VAN ETTEN

MUSIC UNITES RACES

Children of 15 nations and of nine religious groups, including Christian, Jewish and Mohammedan, took part in the Children's Music Festival held for the second year in succession in Jerusalem, Palestine. They sang American negro spirituals, European folk songs and Arabic songs, and played works of Bach, Handel and Beethoven. Their conductor was an American Quaker from Illinois.

Buddy Bomar Favored

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP)—Buddy Bomar, the Houston, Tex., bowling wizard who has rolled 25 perfect games in his spectacular career, was the favorite today to win the national match game championship of Chicago's all-star tournament. After a 30-game grind through an elimination field of 100, Bomar emerged last night with a 6328 total—an average of 210.93. The slender Texan headed a list of 12 competitors who today will enter round robin matches totaling 72 games with the champion being determined Sunday. Included in the final field are Ned Day of West Allis, Wis., national match bowling champion since 1938, and Johnny Crimmins of Detroit, who challenged him in a special 90-game marathon and nearly beat him with a terrific rally.

Rowing Is Suspended

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 11 (AP)—Ogden D. Miller, director of athletics at Yale, announced this morning that regular rowing activities have been suspended for the duration and the appointments of rowing coaches, including Ed Leader, terminated. Both boathouses used by the Yale crews are unavailable, he explained, the Adee boathouse in New Haven harbor having been leased to the coast guard; and the Bob Cook boathouse on the Housatonic at Derby too far away to arrange for transportation.

Annual Shriners' Ball Will Not Be Held This Winter

There will be no annual Shriners' Ball this winter in Kingston.

The Kingston Shriners' Association announced today that the annual entertainment and ball for the benefit of the Industrial Home will not be held this winter owing to the gas and tire rationing program; the increased cost of entertainment, orchestras, and practically all items entering into the conduct of the ball as well as the 10 per cent federal amusement tax which must be paid out of the gross amount of ticket sale.

However, the Industrial Home is in urgent need of funds this year more than ever before and the Shriners feel that the general public as well as themselves will want to do their part in helping support this worthy charitable institution as they have done in years past.

The Shriners are, therefore, asking all those who have so generously supported this annual event by purchasing a patron ticket to send them the price of the patron ticket instead.

In this way the Shriners feel a larger amount can be turned over to the Industrial Home as the entire expense incurred in holding the annual ball will be entirely eliminated and the institution will receive the entire amount donted.

Lend ten per cent, or the enemy will take one hundred per cent.

Wickard May Be Center Of Army-Civilian Fight

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Talk of a possible new row between the army and the civilian administration was heard in Senate cloakrooms today—this time over Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's food control powers.

As reported by one senator, who asked to remain anonymous, the army is apprehensive over the broad new powers delegated to Wickard, pointing out that he could, if he so chose, make the army eat beans seven days a week.

There has been no suggestion that Wickard harbors any such intention, the army critics concede, but they would like to regain full control over the army's diet.

President Roosevelt, in giving Secretary Wickard sweeping control over producing and distributing food for domestic and overseas use, authorized and directed him to "purchase and procure food for such federal agencies and to such extent as he shall determine necessary or desirable, and promulgate policies to govern the purchase and procurement of food by all other federal agencies."

That, in effect, gives the secretary the power to fix the diet of the soldiers, sailors and marines, and what they are afraid of, the senatorial informant said, is that the department might try to provide them with an overabundance of food from a few surplus crops.

Wickard himself told a press conference yesterday that "our boys will be the best fed soldiers" in the world.

Carnera Saves Lady

Madrid, Dec. 11 (AP)—Primo Carnera, former world heavyweight champion, is credited with saving a lady in distress. A dispatch from Rome says that he leaped to the stage and tore a constricting boa from the form of Egilda Cechini, an actress, who was attempting to dance wrapped in the live reptile during a role in a film production. The boa began to crush the actress, the story said. Carnera, who was among the audience, came to her rescue.

Man Enjoys Warm Quarters in Jail

Court Releases Parole Violator for Winter

William Wyble of Blairsville, Pa., charged with possession of a gun without proper permit was given three months in the county jail this morning by County Judge J. Edward Conway. Because of his age and previous good record the Court stated a light sentence would be pronounced.

Assistant District Attorney Fred Stang also produced William Dezendorf of Kingston in court on a charge of violation of parole. Dezendorf admitted that he had not reported at the time prescribed by Chief Probation Officer Lawrence M. Jenson. However on the plea of Mrs. Dezendorf that her husband be released from jail, Judge Conway discharged him from custody. The original charge was abandonment but despite this Mrs. Dezendorf sought her husband's release.

In discharging Dezendorf from custody, Judge Conway said that he was heeding the request of the wife and since there were no children involved in the matter he felt he could meet that request. However Judge Conway said one of the reasons he was prompted to discharge the defendant was that he did not desire to concede to the defendant's liking to have a warm snug place to spend the winter at the expense of the taxpayers. Judge Conway said that Dezendorf apparently was satisfied to remain in jail where it was warm during the winter but that the Court did not desire to comply with his desire. He told Dezendorf that "rather then permit this life of ease and comfort during the winter months" he would grant the request of the wife and discharge Dezendorf. He said he regretted that he could not send the defendant to a penal institution where he would be required to do hard labor.

Court then adjourned to chambers.

Court House Has New Door

Harold Osterhoudt is completing the erection of a storm entrance at the front of the court house. It extends to the front edge of the stone steps, with doors on either side. In addition to protecting the main entrance in time of storm, especially when sleet and icy conditions prevail, it should in some measure help to conserve fuel and also should to some extent do away with drafty conditions which prevail in the sheriff's offices.

A.F.L. Has Objection

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—The American woman may go to work in many fields, but she'll not step behind any bars here as an employe if the AFL Bartenders Union of New York city has its way. Jack Townsend, president of the Union's Local 15, said the union's decision yesterday to bar females from membership was in keeping with a 51-year-old tradition. Members backing Townsend to a man, declared there never was and never would be a competent woman mixologist.

W. C. T. U. Contributes Mobile Unit to American Red Cross

Will Give Pageant At Two Performances

The Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Wurts and Rogers streets, will present its annual Christmas pageant, Sunday, December 20. As in previous years a large audience is anticipated; hence there will be two presentations, one at 7:30 p. m., the other at 8:55 p. m.

The pageant promises to continue the tradition this church has set in this field. Entitled, "Dream Toward Bethlehem," it was written by Harriett Donlevy and has a cast of 33. The theme revolves around the experience of several groups of people who are on the road to Bethlehem, including the Holy Family, all on their way to be listed.

Heavenly music is heard and then in procession come, led by the star, all the characters who have been seen by the roadside and to them the Angel of the Lord appears with the age-old words: "Behold, I bring you tidings of great joy."

The pageant is under the direction of the Rev. Russell Gaenzle. The music will be carried by a double quartet from the senior choir under the direction of Leonard Stine. At the organ will be Frederick Richens.

Packing Plants Sending Cvinya Tushunka Away

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP)—Take 13½ ounces of pork meat, 1½ ounces of lard, some salt, pepper, onion and one bay leaf—put them in a can and you have cvinya tushunka. And the Russian Army wants it.

In one of the large packing plants here processors began this week to prepare millions of pounds of cvinya tushunka, all destined for shipment to the Red Army. Future orders will depend upon the edibility of the product when it gets to the Russian front.

This is the newest innovation in the food revolution. It is even later than de-hydrated pork, which was last month's contribution to the food-for-victory program.

Cvinya tushunka is bulkier than de-hydrated pork, and will take up more shipping space. But officials at Armour and Company, which is filling the Russian order, said today it should be cheaper to make and tastier to eat.

Most unusual aspect of the Russian order, officials asserted, was the requirement regarding lard. Technicians in the industry said they had never heard of packing meat in lard, and they didn't know why the Red Army wanted it that way. Possibly the lard could be used as a spread, similar to butter, it was stated.

No — cvinya tushunka won't solve your meat problem. Even if you could pronounce it, you couldn't order it. Your butcher won't have it. It's strictly a Russian Army dish.

Improve Plantations by Cutting Christmas Trees

"The unusual opportunity at this time to make profit by selling Christmas trees from forest plantations owned by individuals and communities has not been generally publicized," says Professor Edward F. McCarthy of the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University.

Good markets have often led to complete destruction of natural resources and the fear among some foresters that planted stands of trees might be destroyed by a Christmas tree boom.

Professor McCarthy points out that this year transportation difficulties may interfere with shipments of trees over long distances, even if labor could be found to harvest the crop. But local plantations can furnish enough trees to fill the demand and at the same time benefit the plantations and the purchaser.

He calls attention to the fact that many localities in New York and other eastern states now have plantations of suitable evergreen trees such as firs, spruces, pines or even cedar and hemlock which will be improved materially by thinning. In plantations 12 to 20 years old, the trees are growing at such a rapid rate that severe crowding occurs and one-fourth to one-third of the total number may be cut with advantage to the young forest. Spaces left will fill again through growth of the remaining trees and in four to five years another thinning will be needed.

Professor McCarthy says that he believes owners of such plantations will be surprised how quickly trees may be sold at the roadside, especially when the purchaser is assured that the trees are freshly cut and may be expected to hold their needles longer than trees which have been shipped from considerable distances. This is the time to educate the buyer to appreciate fresh Christmas trees.

Pertinent Facts On Conscription

A recent change of selective service regulations now requires registrants to carry with them at all times their most recent notice of classification, Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, New York state director, indicated today.

Ever since the first registration, registrants have been required to have with them at all times the registration certificate indicating they have registered with selective service. The new requirement does not remove from the registrant the liability of at all times knowing his classification and keeping in touch with his local board. It does require the registrant to be at all times provided with evidence of his classification.

General Brown explained the selective service system has prepared a new Form 57 (notice of classification) which, when it is received by the registrant, is of the size of a postal card. The information with regard to classification is confined to an area the same size as the registration certificate. The registrant may cut this portion of the card which will fit an ordinary wallet or card case. The registrant is required to place his signature on the card to prevent use by another person.

The new regulation reads as follows:

623.61-1 Effect of failure to have notice of classification (Form 57) in personal possession. Every person required to present himself for and submit to registration and who is within any age group of persons who have been liable for training and service for six months under selective service law must have in his personal possession at all times, in addition to his registration certificate (Form 2), a valid notice of classification (Form 57) issued to him showing his current classification. Upon request, such person must exhibit such notice of classification (Form 57) to any law-enforcement officer, any representative of the secretary of state, any representative of the secretary of treasury, any representative of the attorney general, any official of national headquarters for selective service, any official of a state headquarters for selective service, any member of a local board or board of appeal, any government appeal agent, and any other official designated by the director of selective service, and, upon entering active service in the armed forces, such person must surrender such notice of classification (Form 57) to his commanding officer who will dispose of it in accordance with the current orders of his service.

The regulations provide further it shall be unlawful for any person to be in possession of a notice of classification issued to another person, or to permit one issued to him to be in the possession of another. Provision is made for the replacement of lost notices.

"Registrants will appreciate, we are certain, that the new regulation has been made for their protection. The protection consists of their ability to give evidence at all times of their current classification. We believe this forward step will have the full cooperation of registrants in this state," General Brown said.

NAZIS WARNED OF NEEDS

Peace will not bring plenty to the Nazis, a recent Berlin dispatch admits. The Schwarze Korps, Berlin newspaper, warned that when war production eases, "civil needs will not for a long time be covered," explaining that scarcities will continue for some time.

Dr. Harold Speight Discusses College Situation Today

Dr. Harold Speight, an educator of wide experience, was the guest speaker at Kiwanis Thursday and discussed the situation that faces the colleges of the country today, with more than a possibility that some of them may not survive these times of stress and changing conditions, and the need of a change in educational methods.

Dr. Speight also addressed the Rotary Club on Wednesday.

Dr. Speight, who spent his boyhood in South Africa, is a graduate of the University of Aberdeen, Scotland and did post-graduate work in Oxford. He was professor of philosophy and biography at Dartmouth, dean of Swarthmore College, later was executive secretary for a project of the Association of Colleges of New York state and at present is dean of St. Lawrence University.

"A lot of questions are being asked these days," he said, "about the kind of education we have been handing out during the past years." He proceeded to discuss some of the things that should be acquired by the student as a result of his four years, or more, in college, emphasizing the need for more cultivation of a sense of responsibility on the part of the student. In this respect he found that students themselves were awakening to this need and to the need of taking a more serious outlook.

In proof of this he cited a report made following a conference of a body of students, in which they called for stricter control over such things as tardiness, poor classwork and the like and recommended that students be expected to complete their tasks and that slackness and softness be eliminated.

The students should get a greater measure of satisfaction out of his college course and be better prepared to enter into the life of his community and do his part. Certainly he should be equipped with some measure of skill, said the speaker, but more than that there should have been stressed such things as faith, motives, ideas of right and wrong and the feeling of responsibility.

It is true, he said, that the church and home have their parts to play in inculcating these things, but the colleges must go farther in this direction than they have in the past.

The speaker questioned whether only the admirals and generals and others in official position were solely to blame for the condition that maintained at the time of Pearl Harbor. "Were we ready," he asked, as he suggested that selfishness and self-interest—the "what do I get out of it" attitude—have been characteristics of the American people.

"Individualism" was found to have its dangers, such as when it leads to an attitude of being "out to get the other fellow" and actions which in many cases are, or verge on the anti-social. He held that the honest virtues of individualism should be preserved, but at the same time social tendencies should be developed.

A lack of the American people was said to be that "we have not known and understood our world well enough; we are inclined to be in a sense isolationists in understanding and knowledge. The speaker referred to "snap judgment on conditions in India," and said to himself, "I grew to manhood knowing little of America."

Education should lead to adaptability, said Dr. Speight as he spoke of business men and others who went to pieces and in some instances took their own lives during the period of the great depression. They had not the ability to adapt themselves to the situation.

Education should develop imagination, ingenuity and ability to tackle a new job; also fitness of both mind and body should be aimed at, said the speaker, in order to meet the "years ahead of all of us," which it was declared, "are going to be pretty tough."

President Henry Darrow announced the names of the committee, headed by E. M. Huben, which is to arrange for the annual installation party.

Secretary Chidsey read an invitation from the Rotary Club for Kiwanis to meet with them on Wednesday, December 30, at which time Frederic Snyder is to be the speaker. The invitation was accepted.

prior to her second marriage to Mr. Koehler. Still another element enters into the case. If Mr. Koehler did strangle her and cause her death, but was not in his right mind at the time, then being mentally unbalanced at the time of the act he could legally inherit her property and dispose of it to his son through the will which had been drawn up some time previous to the incident.

Elliott Cox, a friend, has petitioned the surrogate's court for letters of administration. That matter was returnable on November 16 and a hearing is scheduled for surrogate's court Monday.

The codicil to Mr. Koehler's will which was valid because it never was properly witnessed, left the property to his son. This codicil being illegally drawn, diverts the entire estate back to the previous wills which both Mr. and Mrs. Koehler had made.

Mrs. Koehler's son, Edward Behrendt of New Jersey, is represented in the matter by Frederick Stang. He contends that since Mr. Koehler killed his mother he deprived himself of any and all rights under her will and that therefore her property should become his under a will made prior to her marriage to Koehler.

Koehler's son contends that if his father killed Mrs. Koehler that he did so while out of his mind and that he therefore was not responsible for his act and therefore Mrs. Koehler's property under her last will became the property of Mr. Koehler and when he died the property became his since Mrs. Koehler, the beneficiary under Koehler's will, was already dead.

able belt of fertile land which extends roughly from the attractive seaport of Derna westward to Bengasi. There are further green jebels and wadis—hills and gorges—interspersed with desert clear to Tripoli.

The country surrounding El Agheila, where Field Marshal Rommel is preparing to make a stand against the Eighth Army, is pure desert.

Winter in the desert extends from November to April and there is much rain. In December and January the temperatures drop to freezing and it is particularly cold on top of the great escarpments which rise abruptly out of the desert floor. These tablelands figure largely in the fighting because they afford natural defenses.

Summer is the dry, hot season. Then temperatures soar to maybe 120 degrees or more Fahrenheit in theoretical shade, with soil temperatures much higher. I have seen the soil temperature on the Sinai peninsula east of the Süez Canal hit about 175—and that's hot.

Beginning the middle of March the hot, southeast wind known as the Khamsin blows periodically over a period of 50 days. This is one of the great trials of fighting men, for it is like a blast from a furnace.

The Khamsin frequently is so laden with sand that you can't see through it.

So terrible is this wind that if it blows more than five days each Bedouin is supposed to have the right to kill one of his wives.

The troops broadly speaking camp in tents and trucks. All equipment is reduced to the minimum because of the problem of transport and it should not be forgotten that this is a battle of transport.

The trek from Cairo to El Agheila is 1,500 miles or more. There is only one main road and that is the military highway skirting the Mediterranean.

This vital question of transport is linked inseparably with the greatest hardship of a soldier, be he Allied or Axis, and that is the scarcity of water in a land where men must sweat and acquire mighty thirsts.

I reported last Tuesday that Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander in chief of the Eighth Army, referred in an interview with me to the hardships of the desert and cited as an example that a man might go six months without a bath because of the shortage of water.

Camp sites generally are based on some waterpoint. These are frequent but many of them dry up in the summer. Where there is good water, it generally is not abundant and is brackish, spoiling the flavor of tea or coffee or the food in which it is used.

Each unit has its huge water tanks which travel with the advance. Indeed, every vehicle carries water and he is an unhappy soldier who has an empty canteen on his hip.

In the present drive, the British have chaser the enemy so fast that some of the Allied troops have had to make their water-bottles do two or three days for all purposes. That means about a quart of water. I know, because I've been having that experience myself. You would be surprised how far you can make half a teacup of water go if you must.

Libyan Fly Is Something

Another tribulation which would have made even Job lament is the Libyan fly. He looks like an ordinary Yankee housefly but he has a mean nature that is far removed from even the hoodlums among our house flies.

These creatures breed by the millions and hover in dense clouds about the camps. They are aggressive and attack you in armies. You can't get away from them. Once they hit you, they stick like molasses and bite the hand that feeds them. They swarm over refuse heaps and then wipe their dirty feet on your food and wash themselves in your coffee.

I am reminded of a remark made the other day by my colleague, George Lait, a war correspondent of the International News Service. George, Don Whitehead of the Associated Press and I occupied a small room in a deserted house near Bengasi. I was shaving and washing with my half a teacup of water out of my canteen while the other two lolled luxuriously under their fly and mosquito nets.

The flies were terrible and the nets were swarming. George blew a cloud of cigarette smoke among the pests struggling to get at him through his net and then said contentedly: "Gee, fellers! Just think of the poor devils back home in New York. They ain't got no flies or nuthin'."

I am afraid that I have painted a rather black picture of the desert in this dissertation about the water shortage and flies. Actually, the desert has many real attractions. This time of year there is much delightful weather. The air has a bracing tang and for days on end there's a pleasant warmth in the mid-day sun.

On the whole the desert is healthful enough despite its hardships. The British and American troops appear to be extremely well. They are, of course, out in the open all day and they are early to bed when there is no fighting.

Camps must observe rigid blackout rules lest the enemy see a light and drop bombs.

It is dark before 6 p. m. these days and this means that the boys are in bed by 8 o'clock or so. There's nothing to do but sleep when you can't have lights that are good enough to read or work by.

Naturally, this program will change when the battle is resumed.

So, while the desert presents its problems for the Yankee soldiers, there really is no cause for anxiety back home on that score. It is probably more healthful in general than a lot of places which we choose to call civilized.

Jack & Heintz Workers Get Florida Vacations

Cleveland, Dec. 11 (AP)—Key workers at the fabulous Jack & Heintz Co., which has been criticized by some industries for "spoiling" its employes, are vacationing in Florida at company expense to "keep fit" for their job in the busy warplant.

William S. Jack, company president, said today that every two weeks 11 couples are sent to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., where the concern maintains 11 apartments.

"This allows for four days of travel and 10 days at the seaside, where these employes may enjoy the sunshine and the sea air and recuperate," Jack said. "They come back ready to resume their 12-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week confining jobs with added enthusiasm and improved physical condition."

Highest Birthrate

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP) — The census bureau reported today that the birth rate in October—23.8 per 1,000—was the highest recorded since February 1924. This high rate continues an upward trend which began eight years ago, the bureau said, and has been markedly accelerated since 1939, when the recorded rate was 17.3 per 1,000. Meanwhile the death rate has declined slightly. The bureau said the provisional death rate during the first 10 months of this year was 10.3 per 1,000 compared with 10.6 for the corresponding period last year.

W.P.B. Considers Cut In 1943 Newsprint

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—The War Production Board weighed today the advisability of accepting a proposed newsprint curtailment for 1943 based on each newspaper's 1941 consumption.

The reduction, offered as a guide in controlling print paper consumption, was recommended by the newspaper industry's advisory committee yesterday following notice by Canadian and American government officials to expect a sharp cut in newspaper production next year.

The proposed order which would apply any necessary cuts percentagewise to the 1941 base, suggested that "each individual newspaper (daily, seven-day or non-daily) may consume print paper in each quarter commencing January 1, 1943, in an amount based upon the total tonnage required to produce its net paid circulation of the corresponding quarter of the year 1941."

Steve Is People's Choice

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Steve Vasilakos, who operates a peanut stand outside the White House, has been selected as "the common people's man of the year" by fellow Greeks. The honor will be bestowed upon him at a war bond rally in New York Sunday by the Order of Ahepa. Steve, who inaugurated the order's $50,000,000 war bond drive by opening a bond "booth" beside his peanut stand, asked that this message be read at the rally: "I have never bothered anybody in my life and nobody has stood in my way of making a living. This is what America has meant and means to me."

Center Gets Letter From British Seaman's Mother

The following letter was received at the local Service Men's Center, from the parents of a British seaman who visited the center a while ago. At Christmas time there will be many English sailors in and around New York. Every effort is being made to see that they spend all or part of the holidays in private homes. Anyone who is interested in having one of these men for a few days is asked to call the Volunteer Office for further information.

Dear Ladies:

Received your letter today, and I feel it my duty to write and thank you and your friends for your kindness shewn to my son, Kenneth and his friends on their late visit to Kingston. I have not seen my son yet so I expect to hear a lot about you when he comes home. It is a great comfort to us parents to know that our boys are being cared for by complete strangers. I can assure you the same is being done to our American friends over here. Everything is being done to make them feel at home and I trust it will soon be over, so that they can return to their own homes, and to their dear ones they have left behind.

Well, I must thank you once again for your cheerful letter and such pleasing words. God bless you all.

We remain,
Yours sincerely,
(Signed)

Oil Czar Out of Gas

Pittsburgh, Dec. 11 (AP)—Michael L. (Mike) Benedum, one of the nation's wealthiest men, whose wildcatting ventures opened fabulously rich oil fields in Tampico, Texas, personally is out of gas. He retired his limousine when the rationing began and started using a small station wagon. But his "A" book allowance of three gallons a week isn't enough. Now he has asked for a "B" book and may get one—if he can persuade three neighbors to ride to work with him.

Captain Says Tojo Is One Tough Man

San Francisco, Dec. 11 (AP). "Hup, two, three, fo', hup . . .," cracked the American voice out of the foggy darkness. "Okay, boys, get your stuff together—we're pulling out of here . . ."

The detachment of Marines camped on a cricket field on Tulagi Island in the Solomons could see ten figures approaching. One young sergeant arose dutifully to his feet and started to join the ten.

Then another sergeant yelled a word that meant "Japs!" to the Marines, and their rifles volleyed. Eight of the ten Japs died, including the one with the American education whose voice baited the trap.

"I guess that indicates how tough Tojo is," said Capt. Robert Neuffer, 23, of Hempstead, New York, in relating the incident to reporters yesterday. "That trick took guts."

Appeal Board Would 'Backstop' Henderson

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Republican members of the House banking committee, which handles price-fixing and rationing legislation, served notice today that a determined effort would be made next month to curb the powers of Price Administrator Leon Henderson.

Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.), ranking minority member, told the House yesterday he has ready for introduction in the new Congress legislation to set up an appeal board as "a backstop" behind Henderson.

The board would be made up of representatives of labor, industry, agriculture and finance and would have authority to set aside or amend any of Henderson's orders and regulations.

Provisions for such a board was contained in the original price control act when it passed the House, but a Senate-House conference committee knocked it out. Wolcott, whose committee will gain more Republican members as a result of the November elections, said he had no doubt that the provision would be inserted into the law.

"There will be some restraint placed upon Henderson's power by the next Congress," Wolcott said. He charged the Office of Price Administration was "usurping powers" which Henderson "knows Congress wouldn't give him if he asked for them."

Chairman Steagall (D., Ala.) of the banking committee recently suggested that any revisions of O. P. A. law provide for a board instead of an individual to administer price-fixing and rationing. Steagall advocated creation of such a board in the original act, asserting that the power delegated was "too much power for one man to have."

Di Robilant Is Given 14-Year Prison Term

Rio De Janeiro, Dec. 11 (AP)—Count Edmondo Di Robilant, former official of the Italian Transatlantic Airline Lati, has been sentenced to prison for 14 years on charges that he and five aides convicted with him were Axis spies in South America.

They were accused of sending radio information to the Axis about the movement of Allied shipping and of other pro-Axis spying.

The National Security Tribunal pronounced sentence yesterday under a new law which provides a maximum penalty of death for spies.

One of Count Di Robilant's aides, Enso Di Vicino, was sentenced to 20 years. Three others were given 14-year terms and another eight years. One defendant was acquitted.

In 1931, the count married Helene Westervelt Wilson of Goshen, N. Y., in New York's city hall. She lives here now.

During the fight with the Zero, Tiny and his gunner had seen the dim outline of an island about 30 miles away. He now headed for it. In the ensuing battle with contrary currents, Tiny went unconscious for several hours at a time.

Every fish seemed like a shark to him; he had nightmares; he'd wake up shouting for his fellow pilots; he almost reached land time and again only to be carried out.

But little, curley-haired Tiny never gave up.

On his first night in the life jacket, the only satisfying sight was that of flames from the burning transport, and glowing spots on the horizon marking the locations of five others.

"Finally, on the evening of the third day I half drifted and half swam into a bay. My face was swollen and one of my eyes was closed."

On his second day in the water, Tiny's rear-seat gunner had dropped back after urging Tiny to go on and find land and then send help.

Tiny's last 200 yards before reaching high ground was through glass-sharp coral which cut viciously into his softened hands and feet. When he stumbled and rolled ashore, bleeding and exhausted 73 hours after being shot down, he providentally fell near a rain pool.

"I just lay down and started drinking water and fell asleep," Tiny said.

The next morning his teeth were clattering and his eyes were swollen shut. He heard natives shouting in Oxford English. Native boys carried him to a village of about 85 inhabitants. There he bathed in warm water, had his wounds dressed, and was given rice and hot tea.

Tiny, who once studied at Arkansas State Teachers College, made a special point of observing native customs during his nine-day sojourn at the village.

Women and men dressed alike, bare to the waist, and with a short skirt to the knee. This they kept on during daily swims.

The men were about 5 feet 8, and women about 5 feet 1. Some wore earrings, and the high chief, "Old Tom," had a dollar-sized hole in each earlobe.

The young men and young women didn't pair off in games or for church attendance. Everyone over four years old, including the girls, smoked pipes.

The natives went en masse to the Church of England at dawn and at sunset for services by a native missionary. On Sundays, all work stopped and the day was given over to meditation and chewing of sugar cane stalks. In church, the women sat in the front and sang in a high falsetto, while the men sat in the rear mumbling the songs.

The principal food, morning, noon and night, was sweet potatoes with a little beef, fish, banana and pineapple, cooked in a large communal pot. Most ate standing up, cafeteria style.

"Everyone got along just fine in this Garden of Eden just a short distance from the fighting," said Tiny, adding "I didn't once hear anyone raise his voice, and everyone was happy and contented and kind."

Paul Governali Of Columbia Is Picked for Squad

Frankie Sinkwich Chosen for Second Straight Year; Mike Holovak, B. C., Is Selected

(Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, Dec. 11—Reflecting the tremendous concentration of football strength in the Big Ten and Southeastern conferences, the 18th annual All-America team, chosen today by The Associated Press, allots six places to those two powerful leagues, awards two to the East, and one each to the Missouri Valley, Southern and Pacific Coast conferences.

On the All-America squad of 33 players, named after a nationwide survey of expert opinion, nearly two-thirds are drawn from the Middle West and the South. The actual break-down shows 11 from the South, 10 from the Mid-West, five from the Far West, four from the East and three from the Southwest.

This year's All-America offers three "repeaters" from the 1941 team in the persons of Frank Sinkwich, sensational backfield ace of the Georgia Bulldogs, Southeastern champion and Rose Bowl nominee; Dave Schreiner, crack Wisconsin end, and Dick Wildung, Minnesota's great tackle.

Rounding out the All-America backfield with Sinkwich are Glenn Dobbs, quarterback of Tulsa's Missouri Valley champions and Sugar Bowl nominees; Paul Governali, demon-passer of Columbia University and Mike Holovak, powerful Boston College back.

The line, anchored by the huge Johnson's 235 pounds, is one of the heaviest ever chosen for the All-America, averaging 204 pounds. The backfield hits a 190-pound average.

Tulsa, William & Mary, Kentucky and Columbia all are given representation for the first time since 1925 when The Associated Press first selected its All-America. Ohio State's last representative, in 1930, was Wes Fesler, also an end. The Buckeyes' 1942 representative, Shaw, is the only junior on the team. All the others are seniors.

May Be Last for War

This, the first war-time All-America in a quarter century, may well be the last for some time. Most of the hundreds of players who figured in the selections will be in the armed services long before another football season rolls around.

As a matter of fact, it is doubtful that another full-time collegiate season will be held until the war is over. Transportation and man-power problems may become insurmountable before the 1943 season.

But if the 1942 campaign was the last for the duration, the boys who play the game made it a good one. It was the daffiest, most unpredictable season in memory, partly because sophomores and freshmen were used freely to make up shortages in varsity manpower.

But out of the excitement, one fact definitely was established—that no section in the country could match the power of the Big Ten, with Ohio State, Wisconsin and Michigan, or the Southeast, with Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee and Alabama.

The caliber of play sloughed off considerably in most other sections, notably the Southwest, East and Far West.

Headliner All Season

Sinkwich, named to the All-America for the second successive year, was a headline performer all season and none could seriously challenge his right to a berth on any all-star squad.

Statistics are dry stuff but in Sinkwich's case they serve to illustrate his all-around effectiveness and his immense value to Georgia's fine team. Youngstown Frankie set up a new national record in total offense with 2,174 yards, picking up more than 1,300 yards by passing and averaging better than five yards a try on the ground. Developing as a kicker this season, he averaged better than 36 yards a try. In addition to captaining the team, Sinkwich called the signals and kicked off.

There was real drama in his performances in the sensational victory over Alabama and again in the shocking loss to Auburn. Georgia was trailing Alabama 10-0 after three quarters and then Frankie went into action. Helped unquestionably by the skill of such receivers as George Poschner and Lamar Davis, Sinkwich completed nine of 13 passes in the final quarter of that game, including two to Poschner for touchdowns that won the game.

In the Auburn game, when Georgia's string of nine successive victories was snapped, Sinkwich was individually a great performer but could not match Auburn's red-hot team. Georgia initiated 80 offensive plays against the Plainsmen and Sinkwich either ran, passed or kicked in 72 of them. Despite the fact that Georgia's line was badly outplayed, Sinkwich, playing 55 minutes, was credited with 177 yards passing and 31 rushing, scored Georgia's first touchdown and passed to Lamar Davis for the second. He was a standout in the Georgia Tech game which clinched the Rose Bowl assignment for Georgia.

The Ohio husky also was a spectacular defensive player. In this respect, he was at his best in the Auburn game when he repeatedly was credited with smashing through the interference to pull down the ball carrier. He was an alert and successful pass defender all season.

Coaches of the Southeastern conference, balloting for the annual all-conference team, unanimously picked him for the backfield. No other back in the conference was so honored.

Governali a Standout

It is doubtful if any player in the country accomplished more, with less support, than black-haired, durable Governali. His passing performances are down in cold figures: 87 completed in 165 attempts for 19 touchdowns and 1,442 yards. The touchdown total ties the modern record established by Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian in 1938; the yardage total is just 15 yards short of the record held jointly by O'Brien and Bud Schwenk of Washington University, St. Louis.

What is not so apparent is just what Governali meant to a Columbia team that was outmanned week after week. Columbia never has what other schools would consider adequate manpower. This year, the Lions had even less than usual. They won few games but they were in the ball game always — and solely — because of Governali. His passing record becomes all but incredible when it is taken in conjunction with the admitted weakness of the Columbia line. He never received the protection a record-breaking passer gets from his mates. Rushed constantly by far superior foes, Governali pegged away coolly and accurately and successfully even when the defense knew beyond a shadow of a doubt that a pass was coming.

Perhaps his greatest performance this season was against Colgate when he completed 17 of 25 including three for touchdowns. Colgate, at that time, was one of the East's good teams, certainly far better fortified all along the way than Columbia.

It should be remembered also that Governali did virtually all of Columbia's kicking, averaging just a shade under 40 yards in 56 boots, and was an effective runner although perforce the Lions had to use the airways most of the time. Add to all this the fact that Paul was a 60-minute performer, and the best defensive player on the team, and you begin to get the idea that here is a really fine football player.

Lou Little, who coaches Columbia teams with conspicuous success, is no drum-beater for either himself or his players. But after Columbia's final game, Little had this to say:

"Imagine what Governali would have been if he had had a team around him to give him the sort of help that Davey O'Brien had, when he was playing on a championship team. Governali had help, the utmost that our boys could give him. But we didn't have the manpower. Without Paul, we wouldn't have been in the ball game at any time. He passed, he ran, he kicked, he brought down from behind some of the fastest runners football has seen, and he took a battering week after week without ever a word of complaint and was always on deck for the next scrap."

Dobbs Paced Tulsa

Dobbs, who packs 190 pounds on his six-foot, four-inch frame, was the principal reason for Tulsa's unbroken string of ten victories. This was especially true in Tulsa's victories over such major rivals as Oklahoma and Baylor and, to a lesser degree, over Arkansas.

Tulsa so far outclassed the opposition in its own conference, the Missouri Valley, that Dobbs was used sparingly for the most part. The Golden Hurricane beat every team it faced by not less than 23 points and thus simply did not need to take full advantage of Dobbs' great football talents. The Hurricane ran up 427 points against the opposition's 32, taking Oklahoma, Baylor and Arkansas over the hurdles by a collective 87-7 score.

There can be no question of Dobbs' class. His merits were conceded by rival coaches and by every football expert who saw him play. A fine defensive player and an audacious field general, Dobbs was a genuine, grade-A triple-threat, a fine runner, passer and kicker.

As a runner, he averaged just a shade under 5½ yards per try; as a passer he compiled the amazing average of .626 with 67 completions in 107 attempts, good for 1,066 yards, and with only three interceptions; he was a superlative kicker with an average that soared past 48 yards for the season.

Defensively, Dobbs was a savage tackler and ball hawk. He usually played in the safety spot and nobody got past him all season.

Dobbs put on an All-America performance in the final game with Arkansas. After leading Tulsa 51 yards to a touchdown in the first period, Dobbs suffered a badly twisted knee and was removed from the game and turned over kicking and passing chores to N. A. Keithley. A few minutes later, however, he persuaded Coach Henry Frnka to put him back in the lineup and finished the game at wingback. From that position he caught two passes for a gain of 59 yards, tore through the Arkansas line for 17 yards despite a bad limp, and played a great game on defense.

Statistically, Dobbs' best performance this season was in the game with Washington University of St. Louis. He played only two quarters, but threw ten passes and completed all of them, three for touchdowns, and got loose on one 56-yard sprint for a touchdown.

Holovak Showed Power

For a time this season, Holovak carried the full burden of Boston College's offense on his powerful shoulders. Later on in the season, big Mike got some help but there never was any question about his position as the Eagles' greatest all-round back, defensively as well as offensively.

Up until the Holy Cross debacle when Boston College's eight game winning streak was smashed, Holovak averaged better than 100 yards a game with his plunges through opposing forward walls or his sweeps around the ends.

The Eagles' line was so badly outplayed by Holy Cross that Holovak had no real chance to get going in that game after the first period had been played. But otherwise, the big 205-pounder was a tough man to stop. Against North Carolina Pre-flight's crack array, Holovak broke through for 113 yards and was a big factor in carrying the Eagles to a 7-6 victory that represented the Pre-flighters' first defeat.

A regular for three years, Holovak was co-captain of the Eagles this season.

Schreiner and Shaw, the Western Conference's leading wingmen, capture the two end posts on the All-America on the basis of their consistently spectacular play, offensively and defensively, all season long.

Schreiner, picked for All-America honors for the second year in a row, was an important cog in the formidable Wisconsin machine which came so close to annexing the Big Ten championship and which had the satisfaction, at least, of being the only team to whip Ohio State, the conference champion. A fine pass catcher tackler, blocker and defensive stalwart, Schreiner was a real "iron man" this year, playing 60 minutes against Notre Dame, Ohio State, Iowa and Northwestern and 58 minutes against Minnesota and Great Lakes. In three years of varsity competition Schreiner never had time out called for him. Only twice was ground gained outside him during the past season, Notre Dame getting seven yards and Iowa six. He was exceptionally skillful at hand-playing the interference, frequently pawing his way through to the ball carrier or driving the interferers and ball-carrier out of bounds.

60-minute Performer

Shaw was another 60-minute performer for Ohio State which ran through a tough ten-game schedule with only one loss and finished off with a tremendous 41-12 conquest of Bernie Bierman's Iowa Pre-flighters.

The Buckeye wingman was at his best when the going was toughest, a standout in the Illinois, Michigan and Iowa Pre-flight games. He was equally at home on defense or offense, a fine pass-catcher, blocker and tackler and Ohio State's fastest man down the field on punts. Himself a good punter, he was not used for that duty because of his value downfield in covering Buckeye kicks. Coach Paul Brown said he'd rather get a short punt and have Shaw cover it, than to have a good punt from Shaw and then have the receiver get away.

Tackles of All-America caliber were relatively scarce this season but Johnson and Wildung would have been standouts in any company.

Johnson, a giant of a man, played sensationally for Kentucky's losing team. Moving his tremendous 235-pound bulk with surprising agility and speed, Johnson was an impressive figure in the Wildcat line, and what is more, an immovable one. He was the big reason why Georgia barely got past the Wildcats, 7-6, and he was equally effective against Alabama and the rest. Like Georgia, Alabama finally quit running plays at his side of the line because it cost them an average of three yards every time they did it. He was tremendously effective on defense, standing straight up to his full six feet, six inches, batting would-be blockers out of the way with wide-swinging swipes of his huge paws and then lunging in to tackle the ball carrier.

Minnesota's long Big Ten reign finally came to an end but no blame for that could rest on Wildung's shoulders. This repeater from the 1941 All-America was every bit as effective as he had been the previous season. He had no bad days as he played 60 minutes against Iowa Pre-Flight, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin, and 58 minutes against Northwestern and Iowa. He rates as one of the really fine tackles of recent years, a master of his position.

Guard Play Exceptional

Guard play was of exceptional high quality all over the country and Ramsey and Taylor are selected only after the most careful consideration of the qualifications of their leading rivals, notably Julius Franks of Michigan, Harvey Hardy of Georgia Tech and Jack Lescoulie of U.C.L.A.

Ramsey's play drew universal praise from every team which met William & Mary's Southern conference champions. This durable star called defensive formations all season, led the interference on all outside running plays, and handled the ball on end-arounds from the fullback. He dropped back to protect on passes and his keen guard play was largely responsible for William & Mary's fine defensive record against such rivals as Harvard, Dartmouth, Navy and North Carolina Pre-Flight. He never was taken out for injuries in three years. Ramsey led the All-Southern conference voting this year with 119 vote out of a possible 126.

Stanford got away to a slow start this season but finished strongly and leading the Indians' late surge was the red-headed guard, Taylor. He played 50 minutes or more against Washington, Notre Dame, Washington State and Santa Clara and drew tribute from West Coast coaches as the best guard in the region. His most spectacular exploit came in the Southern California game when he stole the ball from Mickey McCardle and ran 32 yards for the only touchdown of his career.

Domnanovich stood out in a great array of centers including, Lou Sossamon of South Carolina, Spencer Moseley of Yale, Fred Naumetz of Boston College, Fred Negus of Wisconsin, Buddy Gatewood of Baylor and Walter Harrison of Washington.

Captain of the Alabama team, Domnanovich ran the team on defense. His canny selection of defensive set-ups held Alabama's opponents to about 60 yards a game on rushing plays. Playing 50 minutes in every major game, Domnanovich was a brilliant defensive line-backer and a terrific blocker on offense. Throughout the season he was in on three-fourths of Alabama's tackles, a truly great performer against the formidable opposition the Tide faced.

Rickey Sees Many Players Staying On Defense Jobs

By JUDSON BAILEY

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—Doubt that baseball players who have taken defense jobs this winter will be back with their clubs next spring was expressed today by Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Discussing baseball's place in the war effort at a press conference, Rickey said, "I think the government wants to see the sport continued, but I think we must do it with the men the government doesn't want—men who would be idle otherwise.

"A very radical thing has been done in the last ten days. The government now can tell people where to work and where not to work.

"As for its concern with baseball personnel, I don't see it now as a problem of calls by the army, navy, etc. but the problem of shifting men from non-essential to essential industry.

"I know a number of ball players have taken up various kinds of other work this winter. Some of their jobs may be of great importance to the war effort and others may not. But it is conceivable that many of those now working will be held in essential industry. We'll just have to get along with what we have."

Rickey disclosed that one of the Dodgers' brightest stars has just about crossed the threshhold of the army. Pete Reiser the flashy young centerfielder, took his physical examination last week and was reclassified 1-A. His draft board in Brooklyn said he probably would be inducted about January 1. He married last spring but previously had been classified 3-A for helping support his family.

How many others of last year's team may be called to the colors or may need to stay at their off-season tasks, no one could say. Rickey said he had heard nothing more from Dolph Camilli, the veteran first baseman who has declared he would give up baseball to stay on his ranch next year. However, Rickey said if Camilli had not changed his mind when spring training time arrived, he himself would go to California to try to persuade him to play ball.

The possibility that the Dodgers might not train in Florida also was uncovered. Rickey said the Dodgers would observe "not only the letter but the spirit" of the travel curtailment suggested by Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman. He said he had done some thinking about giving up the West Palm Beach training site selected recently, but did not know whether he could find any other satisfactory location.

The reappointment of Fred Fitzsimmons as a pitcher-coach and the establishment of a working agreement with New Orleans in the southern association also were announced.

Rope-Skipping Champ

Miami, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP)—H. E. Dunton, 55, holds the world's record for rope-skipping and he's keeping in shape to meet any challengers. Dunton set the record a few years ago at Birmingham by jumping over the rope 8,630 times in one hour, shattering the old record of 7,518 skips held by Pete Shuster of Martinsburg, W. Va. He keeps in shape by jumping rope 1,000 times each week day. Then he turns to speed bag-punching, using seven different movements for a total of 2,200 punches. After this he runs 70 laps on the Y. M. C. A. track, equalling two and one-half miles, finishes his workout by exercises, and then cools off by swimming several lengths of the pool.

Bertelli's Record

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 11 (AP)—Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame's pass-master, was just as effective this year although not as accurate as in his 1941 sophomore season. In 1941 he passed 123 times, completed 70, had 10 interceptions and made 1027 yards. This fall he tossed 162, completed 72, had 16 picked off and made 1039 yards. He lost 12 yards rushing, however, being tackled on pass attempts. His 1942 total gain is 1027 — matching his sophomore record exactly.

Local Soldiers At Camp Shelby Enjoy Army Life

To All Our Kingston Friends;

You can greatly favor us by having the following pertinent message printed in our daily newspaper. THE KINGSTON DAILY FREEMAN.

We are repeatedly being asked by you folks at home just how well we like being in the Army and especially our training period at CAMP SHELBY. Collectively and in unison, our answer is a loud and most definite, "WE SURE DO". The kind influence by way of welcome words and sincere fellowship extended us from the highest ranking officer to the ordinary private who has been here long before our entering SHELBY is of the warmest and sincerest nature. We are treated here with the greatest degree of human kindness plus the even going temperament of regimental routine. Nothing is really omitted both during the working schedule and after hours that would go a long way towards the making of our stay here most comfortable. We may add that the Company funds even provided athletic equipment for our intercompany sports activities such as basketball, baseball and boxing. These sports, we will all admit go a long way towards building our bodies, and our army morale is also kept on the highest plane due to just this kind of physical endeavor.

The greatest and most important keynote here at Camp SHELBY is "COOPERATION," and fully given over to the grim realization that we are entrusted with the greatest job at the moment to accomplish, we are sincerely interested and are performing it in the greatest style which we know how, doing it wholeheartedly and without the slightest flinching.

Improvement as to our health and appetites is very self evident in all of us which only bespeaks the best kind of treatment accorded us by all officials at the CAMP here. The diets are well balanced and most nourishing, the best evidence on this score is our constant willingness and spirit to give our all in the way of training and even doing extra duties whenever asked. The old adage that an army travels on its stomach is well demonstrated here to the nth degree.

We would like to close the above message with a gentle reminder to all of you Wives, Sweethearts, Parents and Friends. It is simply this:

Please do not worry concerning our welfare here at the Camp. We get the Army's best and they do their darndest to keep us happy.

So, hoping to see all of you real soon on our first furlough, we remain,

Most sincerely yours,
PVT. EDWIN VAN ETTEN

MUSIC UNITES RACES

Children of 15 nations and of nine religious groups, including Christian, Jewish and Mohammedan, took part in the Children's Music Festival held for the second year in succession in Jerusalem, Palestine. They sang American negro spirituals, European folk songs and Arabic songs, and played works of Bach, Handel and Beethoven. Their conductor was an American Quaker from Illinois.

Buddy Bomar Favored

Chicago, Dec. 11 (UP)—Buddy Bomar, the Houston, Tex., bowling wizard who has rolled 25 perfect games in his spectacular career, was the favorite today to win the national match game championship of Chicago's all-star tournament. After a 30-game grind through an elimination field of 100, Bomar emerged last night with a 6328 total—an average of 210.93. The slender Texan headed a list of 12 competitors who today will enter round robin matches totaling 72 games with the champion being determined Sunday. Included in the final field are Ned Day of West Allis, Wis., national match bowling champion since 1938, and Johnny Crimmins of Detroit, who challenged him in a special 90-game marathon and nearly beat him with a terrific rally.

Rowing Is Suspended

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 11 (UP)—Ogden D. Miller, director of athletics at Yale, announced this morning that regular rowing activities have been suspended for the duration and the appointments of rowing coaches, including Ed Leader, terminated. Both boathouses used by the Yale crews are unavailable, he explained, the Adee boathouse in New Haven harbor having been leased to the coast guard; and the Bob Cook boathouse on the Housatonic at Derby too far away to arrange for transportation.

Man Enjoys Warm Quarters in Jail

Court Releases Parole Violator for Winter

William Wyble of Blairsville, Pa., charged with possession of a gun without proper permit was given three months in the county jail this morning by County Judge J. Edward Conway. Because of his age and previous good record the Court stated a light sentence would be pronounced.

Assistant District Attorney Fred Stang also produced William Dezendorf of Kingston in court on a charge of violation of parole. Dezendorf admitted that he had not reported at the time prescribed by Chief Probation Officer Lawrence M. Jenson. However on the plea of Mrs. Dezendorf that her husband be released from jail, Judge Conway discharged him from custody. The original charge was abandonment but despite this Mrs. Dezendorf sought her husband's release.

In discharging Dezendorf from custody, Judge Conway said that he was heeding the request of the wife and since there were no children involved in the matter he felt he could meet that request. However Judge Conway said one of the reasons he was prompted to discharge the defendant was that he did not desire to concede to the defendant's liking to have a warm snug place to spend the winter at the expense of the taxpayers. Judge Conway said that Dezendorf apparently was satisfied to remain in jail where it was warm during the winter but that the Court did not desire to comply with his desire. He told Dezendorf that "rather then permit this life of ease and comfort during the winter months" he would grant the request of the wife and discharge Dezendorf. He said he regretted that he could not send the defendant to a penal institution where he would be required to do hard labor.

Court then adjourned to chambers.

Court House Has New Door

Harold Osterhoudt is completing the erection of a storm entrance at the front of the court house. It extends to the front edge of the stone steps, with doors on either side. In addition to protecting the main entrance in time of storm, especially when sleet and icy conditions prevail, it should in some measure help to conserve fuel and also should to some extent do away with drafty conditions which prevail in the sheriff's offices.

A.F.L. Has Objection

New York, Dec. 11 (AP)—The American woman may go to work in many fields, but she'll not step behind any bars here as an employe if the AFL Bartenders Union of New York city has its way. Jack Townsend, president of the Union's Local 15, said the union's decision yesterday to bar females from membership was in keeping with a 51-year-old tradition. Members heard Townsend, a man, declared there never was and never would be a competent woman mixologist.

Improve Plantations by Cutting Christmas Trees

"The unusual opportunity at this time to make profit by selling Christmas trees from forest plantations owned by individuals and communities has not been generally publicized," says Professor Edward F. McCarthy of the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University.

Good markets have often led to complete destruction of natural resources and the fear among some foresters that planted stands of trees might be destroyed by a Christmas tree boom.

Professor McCarthy points out that this year transportation difficulties may interfere with shipments of trees over long distances, even if labor could be found to harvest the crop. But local plantations can furnish enough trees to fill the demand and at the same time benefit the plantations and the purchaser.

He calls attention to the fact that many localities in New York and other eastern states now have plantations of suitable evergreen trees such as firs, spruces, pines or even cedar and hemlock which will be improved materially by thinning. In plantations 12 to 20 years old, the trees are growing at such a rapid rate that severe crowding occurs and one-fourth to one-third of the total number may be cut with advantage to the young forest. Spaces left will fill again through growth of the remaining trees and in four to five years another thinning will be needed.

Professor McCarthy says that he believes owners of such plantations will be surprised how quickly trees may be sold at the roadside, especially when the purchaser is assured that the trees are freshly cut and may be expected to hold their needles longer than trees which have been shipped from considerable distances. This is the time to educate the buyer to appreciate fresh Christmas trees.

Pertinent Facts On Conscription

A recent change of selective service regulations now requires registrants to carry with them at all times their most recent notice of classification, Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, New York state director, indicated today.

Ever since the first registration, registrants have been required to have with them at all times the registration certificate indicating they have registered with selective service. The new requirement does not remove from the registrant the liability of at all times knowing his classification and keeping in touch with his local board. It does require the registrant to be at all times provided with evidence of his classification.

General Brown explained the selective service system has prepared a new Form 57 (notice of classification) which, when it is received by the registrant, is of the size of a postal card. The information with regard to classification is confined to an area the same size as the registration certificate. The registrant may cut this portion of the card which will fit an ordinary wallet or card case. The registrant is required to place his signature on the card to prevent use by another person.

The new regulation reads as follows:

623.61-1 Effect of failure to have notice of classification (Form 57) in personal possession. Every person required to present himself for and submit to registration and who is within any age group of persons who have been liable for training and service for six months under selective service law must have in his personal possession at all times, in addition to his registration certificate (Form 2), a valid notice of classification (Form 57) issued to him showing his current classification. Upon request, such person must exhibit such notice of classification (Form 57) to any law-enforcement officer, any representative of the secretary of state, any representative of the secretary of treasury, any representative of the attorney general, any official of national headquarters for selective service, any official of a state headquarters for selective service, any member of a local board or board of appeal, any government appeal agent, and any other official designated by the director of selective service, and, upon entering active service in the armed forces, such person must surrender such notice of classification (Form 57) to his commanding officer who will dispose of it in accordance with the current orders of his service.

The regulations provide further it shall be unlawful for any person to be in possession of a notice of classification issued to another person, or to permit one issued to him to be in the possession of another. Provision is made for the replacement of lost notices.

"Registrants will appreciate, we are certain, that the new regulation has been made for their protection. The protection consists of their ability to give evidence at all times of their current classification. We believe this forward step will have the full cooperation of registrants in this state," General Brown said.

Dr. Harold Speight Discusses College Situation Today

Dr. Harold Speight, an educator of wide experience, was the guest speaker at Kiwanis Thursday and discussed the situation that faces the colleges of the country today, with more than a possibility that some of them may not survive these times of stress and changing conditions, and the need of a change in educational methods.

Dr. Speight also addressed the Rotary Club on Wednesday.

Dr. Speight, who spent his boyhood in South Africa, is a graduate of the University of Aberdeen, Scotland and did post-graduate work in Oxford. He was professor of philosophy and biography at Dartmouth, dean of Swarthmore College, later was executive secretary for a project of the Association of Colleges of New York state and at present is dean of St. Lawrence University.

"A lot of questions are being asked these days," he said, "about the kind of education we have been handing out during the past years." He proceeded to discuss some of the things that should be acquired by the student as a result of his four years, or more, in college, emphasizing the need for more cultivation of a sense of responsibility on the part of the student. In this respect he found that students themselves were awakening to this need and to the need of taking a more serious outlook.

In proof of this he cited a report made following a conference of a body of students, in which they called for stricter control over such things as tardiness, poor classwork and the like and recommended that students be expected to complete their tasks and that slackness and softness be eliminated.

The students should get a greater measure of satisfaction out of his college course and be better prepared to enter into the life of his community and do his part. Certainly he should be equipped with some measure of skill, said the speaker, but more than that there should have been stressed such things as faith, motives, ideas of right and wrong and the feeling of responsibility.

It is true, he said, that the church and home have their parts to play in inculcating these things, but the colleges must go farther in this direction than they have in the past.

The speaker questioned whether only the admirals and generals and others in official position were solely to blame for the condition that maintained at the time of Pearl Harbor. "Were we ready," he asked, as he suggested that selfishness and self-interest—the "what do I get out of it" attitude—have been characteristics of the American people.

"Individualism" was found to have its dangers, such as when it leads to an attitude of being "out to get the other fellow" and actions which in many cases are, or verge on the anti-social. He held that the honest virtues of individualism should be preserved, but at the same time social tendencies should be developed.

A lack of the American people was said to be that "we have not known and understood our world well enough; we are inclined to be in a sense isolationists in understanding and knowledge. The speaker referred to "snap judgment on conditions in India," and said to himself, "I grew to manhood knowing little of America."

Education should lead to adaptability, said Dr. Speight as he spoke of business men and others who went to pieces and in some instances took their own lives during the period of the great depression. They had not the ability to adapt themselves to the situation.

Education should develop imagination, ingenuity and ability to tackle a new job; also fitness of both mind and body should be aimed at, said the speaker, in order to meet the "years ahead of all of us," which it was declared, "are going to be pretty tough."

President Henry Darrow announced the names of the committee, headed by E. M. Huhen, which is to arrange for the annual installation party.

Secretary Chidsey read an invitation from the Rotary Club for Kiwanis to meet with them on Wednesday, December 30, at which time Frederic Snyder is to be the speaker. The invitation was accepted.

Oil Czar Out of Gas

Pittsburgh, Dec. 11 (AP)—Michael L. (Mike) Benedum, one of the nation's wealthiest men, whose wildcatting ventures opened fabulously rich oil fields in Tampico, Texas, personally is out of gas. He retired his limousine when the rationing began and started using a small station wagon. But his "A" book allowance of three gallons a week isn't enough. Now he has asked for a "B" book and may get one—if he can persuade three neighbors to ride to work with him.

Captain Says Tojo Is One Tough Man

San Francisco, Dec. 11 (AP). "Hup, two, three, fo', hup . . ." cracked the American voice out of the foggy darkness. "Okay, boys, get your stuff together—we're pulling out of here . . ."

The detachment of Marines camped on a cricket field on Tulagi Island in the Solomons could see ten figures approaching. One young sergeant arose dutifully to his feet and started to join the ten.

Then another sergeant yelled a word that meant "Japs!" to the Marines, and their rifles volleyed. Eight of the ten Japs died, including the one with the American education whose voice baited the trap.

"I guess that indicates how tough Tojo is," said Capt. Robert Neuffer, 23, of Hempstead, New York, in relating the incident to reporters yesterday. "That trick took guts."

Appeal Board Would 'Backstop' Henderson

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)—Republican members of the House banking committee, which handles price-fixing and rationing legislation, served notice today that a determined effort would be made next month to curb the powers of Price Administrator Leon Henderson.

Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.), ranking minority member, told the House yesterday he has ready for introduction in the new Congress legislation to set up an appeal board as "a backstop" behind Henderson.

The board would be made up of representatives of labor, industry, agriculture and finance and would have authority to set aside or amend any of Henderson's orders and regulations.

Provisions for such a board was contained in the original price control act when it passed the House, but a Senate-House conference committee knocked it out. Wolcott, whose committee will gain more Republican members as a result of the November elections, said he had no doubt that the provision would be inserted into the law.

"There will be some restraint placed upon Henderson's power by the next Congress," Wolcott said. He charged the Office of Price Administration was "usurping powers" which Henderson "knows Congress wouldn't give him if he asked for them."

Chairman Steagall (D., Ala.) of the banking committee recently suggested that any revisions of O. P. A. law provide for a board instead of an individual to administer price-fixing and rationing. Steagall advocated creation of such a board in the original act, asserting that the power delegated was "too much power for one man to have."

Di Robilant Is Given 14-Year Prison Term

Rio De Janeiro, Dec. 11 (AP)—Count Edmondo Di Robilant, former official of the Italian Transatlantic Airline Lati, has been sentenced to prison for 14 years on charges that he and five aides convicted with him were Axis spies in South America.

They were accused of sending radio information to the Axis about the movement of Allied shipping and of other pro-Axis spying.

The National Security Tribunal pronounced sentence yesterday under a new law which provides a maximum penalty of death for spies.

One of Count Di Robilant's aides, Enso Di Vicino, was sentenced to 20 years. Three others were given 14-year terms and another eight years. One defendant was acquitted.

In 1931, the count married Helene Westervelt Wilson of Goshen, N. Y., in New York's city hall. She lives here now.

An aide to the late General Italo Balbo, Count Di Robilant was lost early in 1931 during a flight in Brazil and was found after 18 days in the jungle. A flying mate died after the ordeal.

on the tail and went down with it."

During the fight with the Zero, Tiny and his gunner had seen the dim outline of an island about 30 miles away. He now headed for it. In the ensuing battle with contrary currents, Tiny went unconscious for several hours at a time.

Every fish seemed like a shark to him; he had nightmares; he'd wake up shouting for his fellow pilots; he almost reached land time and again only to be carried out.

But little, curley-haired Tiny never gave up.

On his first night in the life jacket, the only satisfying sight was that of flames from the burning transport, and glowing spots on the horizon marking the locations of five others.

"Finally, on the evening of the third day I half drifted and half swam into a bay. My face was swollen and one of my eyes was closed."

On his second day in the water, Tiny's rear-seat gunner had dropped back after urging Tiny to go on and find land and then send help.

Tiny's last 200 yards before reaching high ground was through glass-sharp coral which cut viciously into his softened hands and feet. When he stumbled and rolled ashore, bleeding and exhausted 73 hours after being shot down, he providentally fell near a rain pool.

"I just lay down and started drinking water and fell asleep," Tiny said.

The next morning his teeth were clattering and his eyes were swollen shut. He heard natives shouting in Oxford English. Native boys carried him to a village of about 85 inhabitants. There he bathed in warm water, had his wounds dressed, and was given rice and hot tea.

Tiny, who once studied at Arkansas State Teachers College, made a special point of observing native customs during his nine-day sojourn at the village.

Women and men dressed alike, bare to the waist, and with a short skirt to the knee. This they kept on during daily swims.

The men were about 5 feet 8, and women about 5 feet 1. Some wore earrings, and the high chief, "Old Tom," had a dollar-sized hole in each earlobe.

The young men and young women didn't pair off in games or for church attendance. Everyone over four years old, including the girls, smoked pipes.

The natives went en masse to the Church of England at dawn and at sunset for services by a native missionary. On Sundays, all work stopped and the day was given over to meditation and chewing of sugar cane stalks. In church, the women sat in the front and sang in a high falsetto, while the men sat in the rear mumbling the songs.

The principal food, morning, noon and night, was sweet potatoes with a little beef, fish, banana and pineapple, cooked in a large communal pot. Most ate standing up, cafeteria style.

"Everyone got along just fine in this Garden of Eden just a short distance from the fighting," said Tiny, adding "I didn't once hear anyone raise his voice, and everyone was happy and contented and kind."
